More than airline involved in crash suits

by TONI GINNETTI

Second of two parts

The airlines are generally blamed for air accidents, except in court. Today Herald reporters write about the airline industry's efforts to train employes for emergencies and the disaster plans used by area hospitals in case of an aviation disaster.

To the layman who uses air transportation, a plane crash would seem the obvious fault of an airline.

The years that it takes to resolve wrongful death claims filed in the wake of commercial air disasters are the best proof of the fallacy of that reasoning.

While an airline typically is the prime defendant named, manufacturers of aircraft, fuel manufacturers, even the U.S. government which employs air traffic controllers through the Federal Aviation Administration, commonly are named as defendants.

DOMESTIC AIR CRASH litigation generally is filed in federal court because of the cross-state residency of victims and airline headquarters. In Cook County, however, a number of cases are filed in the state circuit court because many airlines have offices in Chicago.

THERE ARE generally two steps to resolving airline litigation. The establishment of liability for an accident must first be determined, then individual damage claims are settled.

"Early on the liability is usually resolved, and then the cases will be around for years resolving damages," according to noted personal injury attorney Philip H. Coorby. "It's not the cast itself that's taking so long, it's the resolution of the damages."

Liability "is the major hurdle," according to Wallace E. Maloney, an expert in air litigation who represents airlines. If an airline is "obviously liable" for a mishap, "there is no sense in prolonging it," Maloney said. "It's a matter of 'get out the check book.' "

IN THE 1968 CRASH of a North Central Airlines converted turbo-prop jet at O'Hare Airport, lawsuits named four parties as defendants They included the airline, General Motors Corp , which converted the craft, Pacific Airmotive Corp., a subcontractor of GM; and General Dynamics Corp , the craft's original builder.

Only the airline was found liable.

Some 95 per cent of all suits are settled out of court, but attorneys will disagree on the "psychology" of delaying settlements.

Hospitals set for disaster at O'Hare

by KURT BAER

Resurrection Hospital, on Chicago's Far Northwest Side, sits in the middle of a "disaster triangle."

To the north, Chicago and North Western Ry. trains rumble night and day; to the south stretches the Kennedy Expressway and the Chicago Transit Authority's Jefferson Park train line; and in the west, the world's busiest airport, O'Hare Field, buzzes with take-offs and landings.

Resurrection is O'Hare's hospital, and twice it has had to implement disaster plans because of crashes at the airport.

• Dec 27, 1968, a North Central Airlines twin-engine turboprop plane crashed into a Braniff International Airlines hangar while attempting to land in a heavy fog. Twenty-seven of the 45 persons on board the plane were killed.

• Dec. 20, 1972, a North Central Airlines DC-9 collided with a Delta Airlines Convair 880 on the runway, killing 10 of the passengers on the North Central jet.

IN BOTH INSTANCES, the dead and the injured were brought to Resurrection's door, the hospital closest to O'Hare

A telephone call from police and fire officials initially alerts the hospital. "A Code Zero is sounded and all the supervisors, nurses and doctors available respond to the emergency room," says Sister Donna Marie, Resurrection's assistant director of nursing.

Injuries are assessed and assigned priority for treatment according to a system known as "Triage." Persons needing immediate life-saving treatment are cared for first, followed by those who require immediate surgery, X-ray, minimal treatment and observation, treatment and release.

EVERY HOSPITAL is required to have a disaster plan and to practice it, says John Wilke, chairman of the mass casualty committee at Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge.

"If your plan is not practiced and not put to use, it might as well sit on the shelf," says Wilke "It's easy to think of disaster planning as just another committee. But when the time actually comes, that's when the benefits are reaped."

Lutheran General, as well as Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines, and Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, are back-up hospitals for Resurrection in airport injury cases. Four members of the North Central crew injured in the 1973 crash were brought to Lutheran General for treatment.

CODE YELLOW sounds the mass casualty alert at Lutheran General.

MOUNT PROSPECT POLICE check the car in which Richard M. Krieger, 27, Chicago, was hurt Monday afternoon when the auto was struck by a Soo Line R.R. freight train at a private crossing in Wheeling Township north of Des Plaines. Krieger received possible chest injuries, and was reported in fair condition Monday night at Holy Family Hospital. (Related story, Page 3)

Ryan orders Pal-Grove cleanup

Arlington Heights officials have threatened to take legal action against merchants and managers of the Pal-Grove Shopping Center if a cleanup campaign begun last week is not maintained.

"It's going to be cleaned up," said Village Pres. James T. Ryan, "and if it's not we have some pretty heavy clubs we can use to see that it is. We're going to take stricter measures with them and could consider even closing them down if necessary."

Ryan ordered the crackdown on the center after a recent article and editorial in The Herald revealed numerous health code violations by tenants and management.

SINCE 1974, the village has warned the center at least six times to correct trash and health code violations, but each time problems resurfaced soon after compliance The center is located at Palatine Road and Windsor Drive.

Health Dept. Director George Weinand said "substantial progress" has been made at the center and daily inspections will continue until the area meets village standards.

"Although we're not completely satisfied with the results yet," Weinand said, "progress has been made On the basis of that we have withheld issuing citations."

Local ordinances provide fines of up to $500 for each tenant and the management, Affiliated Realty of Chicago, for every day a violation is found.

Bill Mack, village environmental health officer, said tenants have been ordered to fix potholes in the parking lot, remove wires and bird nests from ventilation screens, repair a cracked barber's pole and generally clean up the area.

"IT DOESN'T look like we'll have to, but if they do slip we won't hesitate to cite them," Mack said. "We'll give them several weeks to complete the cleanup and if the situation slides after that we will fine them "

An Affiliated Realty representative and merchants, some of whom had complained about the manager's maintenance service, now say they are pleased with the changes.

"Whenever we've been contacted by the village about a problem out there we've cooperated and I don't see any reason why we won't do the same this time," Walter Hegenbuckle of Affil-

5 years probation for Patty Hearst

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst was sentenced Monday to five years probation for two charges stemming from a 1974 crime spree.

Miss Hearst, 23, flanked by her two attorneys, stood and faced the judge to hear the sentence that could have been life in prison.

She had pleaded "no contest" April 18 to charges of assault with a deadly weapon and robbery while a member of the Symbionese Liberation Army. Nine other charges, including assault, robbery and kidnaping, were dismissed at the time of sentencing.

JUDGE E. TALBOT Callister sentenced her to five years probation on each of two counts with several conditions, including financial restitution to the owner of a sporting goods store she peppered with machine gun fire.

Other conditions were that she seek training or schooling and maintain a residence under the direction of the probation officer.

"I have been a criminal judge for nearly seven years," Judge E. Talbot Callister said. "During that time, I don't remember how many people I have sentenced, but it must be several thousand. None of those decisions has been more difficult than the one that faces me today."

He said he was convinced Miss Hearst would be in physical danger if she were to be jailed.

"SHE IS NOT A present or a future law enforcement risk," Callister said, adding that all law enforcement agencies involved in the case agreed that further confinement was not necessary.

Dressed in a long tan skirt and brown sweater, Miss Hearst sat quietly through the court proceeding Monday and arose to say only, "Yes, your honor," when asked if she was ready for sentencing.

Albert Johnson, who has defended Miss Hearst here, said he decided on the "no contest" plea because he was convinced ,she could not get a fair

Cop union chief arrested again for drunken driving

John Flood

John J. Flood, president of the Combined Counties Police Assn., again has been arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated and improper lane usage.

Flood, 36, of 407 Killarney, Mundelein, was driving northbound on Arlington Heights Road, just south of Checker Drive Saturday when his car was clocked by Buffalo Grove police speeding 43 miles per hour in a 35 mile-per-hour zone.

Patrolman Walter Grochowski reported that he pulled Flood's car over after he saw it traveling on an "unsure" path.

POLICE SAID THERE was a heavy odor of alcohol on Flood's breath as he "staggered" from his car about 4 a.m. He then was placed under arrest and brought back to the Buffalo Grove police station where he was charged with speeding, improper lane usage, drunken driving, refusing to take a breathalyzer test and battery.

Flood was charged with battery after he allegedly grabbed Sgt. Peter Lippert around the neck with his hands at the police station and said "Don't tell me what to do."

Police said Flood was uncooperative during arrest procedures and several times requested police not charge him with the drunken driving count.

Flood is scheduled to appear in the Arlington Heights branch of the Cook County Circuit Court June 21 at 11 a.m. He is free, after posting a $1,000 bond Saturday.

FLOOD SAID MONDAY he would not comment on the charges on advice of his attorneys.

"All I can really say is that I'll go to court and stand trial on these (charges)," said Flood, a Cook County Sheriff's policeman on leave.

The CCPA president was arrested by Mundelein police Oct. 6 for drunken driving and improper lane usage after his car struck another car in a parking lot. Flood was placed in a municipal lockup after refusing to be fingerprinted or photographed.

Flood also was charged with leaving the scene of an accident in connection with the collision. All three charges were consolidated and are scheduled to be heard in the Waukegan branch of Lake County Circuit Court May 17.

The CCPA, the only organization of its kind in the Chicago area, was formed in 1969 by Flood, who left his job as sergeant for Cook County to devote full time to the union.

The organization has grown to more than 2,000 members and represents 50 chapters, including Wheeling, Des Plaines and Mount Prospect. Mundelein and Buffalo Grove are not members of the CCPA.

Arlington exec, 35, shot by employe

A 35-year-old executive from Arlington Heights was shot and wounded in Chicago Monday morning by a disgruntled employe allegedly out to settle a score with another executive of the same firm, police said. John Olson, 418 S. Reuter Dr., was reported in fair condition with a gunshot wound in the chest Monday night at St. Mary's Hospital, Chicago, after he was shot at 10:25 a.m. Monday at Rexnord Inc., 1765 N. Elston Ave., Chicago. Police arrested and charged David Walden, 35, of Asheville, N.C., with aggravated battery. Walden allegedly entered Rexnord Inc. and demanded to see a company executive whom police refused to identify. Walden then pulled a gun from a bag and shot Olson, personnel manager with the firm, police said. Other employes jumped on and disarmed Walden, police said.

House dismisses Young bid

The U.S. House, voting generally along party lines, acted Monday to dismiss the election contest complaint filed by former U.S. Rep. Samuel H. Young. The action upholds U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva's narrow, 201-vote victory over Young in the 10th Congressional District election last November. The house vote was 272-107 with three congressmen voting present. Young, a Republican who was unseated by Mikva in 1974, still is pressing a lawsuit in the Illinois Supreme Court contesting the outcome of the election. Young was not available for comment Monday on the House's action, which effectively ends the post election appeal process for the November election.

Ask Skokie ban overturned

The American Civil Liberties Union asked the Illinois Court of Appeals Monday to overturn a court order barring a Nazi group from holding a rally in the predominantly Jewish suburb of Skokie. Cook County Circuit Court Judge Joseph M. Wosik issued an injunction April 29 preventing a rally by the group. But ACLU attorney David Goldberger said the group will hold its rally May 22 if the appeals court decides in the Nazi's favor. Since the Nazis promised to march in the suburb, the village board has passed an ordinance prohibiting demonstrations by persons in military type uniforms or those displaying swastikas or distributing flyers advocating their views.

Dutch collector vows innocence in Jewish deaths

AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands (UPI) — Millionaire art collector Pieter Menten, accused of murdering more than 200 Jews for the Nazis, Monday labeled his trial a "KGB stunt" and told the court it was "mistaking me for my brother."

Menten, 77, could receive the death penalty if found guilty.

Menten, who until a year ago lived in semi-retirement in a 50-room mansion crammed with paintings and art objects, was charged with involvement in the 1941 killing of more than 200 persons, mostly Jews, in two Nazi-occupied towns now in Soviet territory.

The Dutch millionaire said he had used his Nazi connections to "do what I could" for Jewish acquaintances and challenged the authority of the three-judge court to try his case.

"I AM NOT guilty," Menten shouted. "All of this trial is a show trial. It is a KGB (Soviet Secret police) stunt. The public prosecutor is a pawn on the chessboard of the Russians."

Menten said he never had been to one of the villages, Urycz. "You are mistaking me for my brother," he told the prosecution.

He said documents about him from the files from the then Dutch consulate at Cracow were "crude fabrications." He said he used his alleged Nazi connections "to do what I could" for Jewish acquaintances but he did not name any of them.

Menten denied as "nonsensical" allegations that he acquired part of his art collection from his victims. "Those Jews in the country were poor bastards and from them I had nothing to take," he said.

Menten lived in obscurity until investigations into his wartime behavior were reopened last year triggered by an Israeli newspaper report.

THE FIRST WITNESS to be called to the stand was A. J. Van Der Leeuw of the State Institute for War Documentation in Amsterdam, who gave a historical survey of the Nazi occupation of Poland and said that it had been proved from German documents that Menten was a member of the Nazi SS.

The prosecution plans to call up to 100 witnesses from Poland, the Soviet Union, Israel, West Germany, Austria, the United States, Sweden and Holland in the trial — which is expected to last until the end of the year.

The defense has called 57 witnesses.

The initial part of the trial will run six days during the next two weeks. Then there will be a summer break, during which a Dutch judiciary committee, which already has made one trip to the Soviet Union, will return for further investigations.

Widow was burglars' source of 'golden eggs'

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Three times in the past two years — possibly more — burglars broke into the home of Marjorie V. Jackson and made off with hundreds of thousands of dollars, investigators said Monday.

Mrs. Jackson, wealthy widow of the former president of Standard Food Stores, mentioned the invasions to deliverymen or shopkeepers, police said, but "wouldn't even report them" to police.

That's what has police stumped about the shooting death of Mrs. Jackson at the hands of another intruder last week. There was no need for the burglars to shoot her at all.

"They were pretty much safe so long as they didn't hurt her," a police spokesman said.

NOW THERE IS a police manhunt for her killer, and police are looking into those earlier burglaries for clues.

One detective described her slaying as "the killing of the goose that was laying the golden eggs."

The 66-year-old recluse was killed sometime last week, shot in the stomach with a 22-caliber handgun. She bled to death, unable to call for help because the telephone wires on her estate had been cut.

After firemen discovered Mrs. Jackson's body Saturday, police recovered more than $5 million in cash from the house. They said they may never know how much last week's burglars may have carried off.

REPORTS INDICATED that Mrs. Jackson's estate could total more than $20 million. The $5 million — found cached in a plastic garbage can, tool boxes and other spots in the sprawling ranch house — was turned over to the heirs, although a will had not been located.

"There could possibly still be some more there that we didn't find," Detective Sgt. Harlan Rynard said.

Rynard said Mrs. Jackson's pajama-clad body was not badly burned by a fire set to conceal the crime.

Police speculated Mrs. Jackson surprised the intruders and one of them shot her in panic, but the burglars should have known they were safe because, in March when two men burglarized the house, Mrs. Jackson watched from another room but did not call the police.

"SHE DIDN'T WANT the publicity. I can understand why," Rynard said.

Police also questioned three men who were alleged to have broken into the house earlier and made off with $817,000.

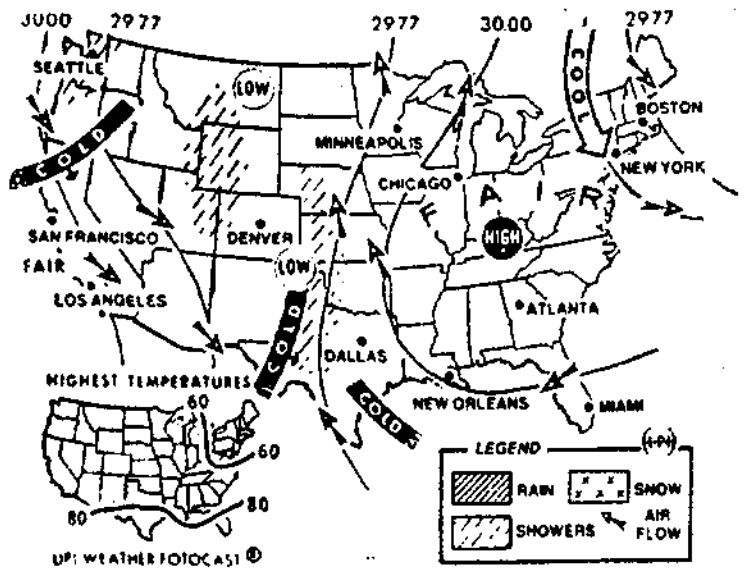

Mrs. Jackson had withdrawn large sums of money from banks, authorities said, because a banker had embezzled a trust fund totaling more than $500,000. She also had lost more than $500,000 in a confidence game.

In addition to the currency, investigators found more than 1,000 aluminum foil wrapped packages in the house bearing inscriptions that they were gifts from the widow to Jesus Christ or God.

Carter, Assad peace talks 'very friendly'

LONDON (UPI) — President Carter and Syrian President Hafez Assad held "very friendly" talks Monday on Middle East peace prospects which ran more than an hour overtime. Carter said the meeting "couldn't have been better."

Carter returned Monday night to London for a NATO meeting today. He made no comment upon arrival and drove straight to the U.S. ambassador's residence, where he is staying.

The talks, which Assad said were being held in an "atmosphere of faith and optimism," centered on the possibility of creating "demilitarized zones" between Israel and the Arabs and the establishment of a Palestinian homeland as part of an over-all peace settlement.

Carter departed for London an hour and 40 minutes behind schedule after a dinner of roast beef, strawberries and California wines.

"THEY (THE TALKS) couldn't have been better," the smiling President sai dbefore leaving, but did not make any departure statement.

During the talks, Assad detailed the long-standing Arab plan for creating a Palestinian state on the West Bank of Jordan and in the Gaza Strip, both captured by Israeli during the 1967 war.

Carter's national security assistant, Zbigniew Brzezinski, who participated in the three-hour, 25-minute session, said both Carter and Assad agreed any reconvening of the Geneva peace conference "should be well prepared."

Last week Assad made a major concession in announcing for the first time Syria would be willing to discuss such "demilitarized zones" as part of an overall settlement provided they were on both sides. Syria previously had demanded the return of "every inch" of Arab land captured by Israel in the 1967 war.

Brzezinski said the two sides also discussed the question of a Palestinian homeland, Palestinian participation in formal peace negotiations, and "the meaning of peace."

ASKED IF THE United States had indications the Palestinian Liberation Organization would recognize the state of Israel in return for Israeli acceptance of Palestinian homeland, Brzezinski answered, "Not at this stage."

Carter said when he has finished his round of meetings with Arab and Israeli leaders he will send Sec. of State Cyrus Vance to the Middle East to promote peace negotiations as prelude to resumption of the Geneva Middle East conference.

Carter flew to Geneva from London where he patched up Franco-American differences in a morning meeting with President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and agreed to visit Paris this autumn as prelude to another western summit conference.

Carter and Giscard patched up relations over a typical French breakfast of coffee and hot croissants at the French embassy.

Speaking to reporters afterward, Giscard, not noted for passing out compliments, praised Carter as "a man of great simplicity and modest attitude, who rejects any form of exaggeration and who is ready to seek information or advice from others."

CARTER ALSO JOINED the leaders of Britain and France in a blunt warning to the Soviet Union that detente would be threatened by any Kremlin tampering with their rights in isolated West Berlin.

"They reaffirmed that this status of the special area of Berlin could not be modified unilaterally," the three powers, who were joined in talks on Berling by West Germany, said in a formal declaration at the end of a 2½-hour meeting.

"The three powers," the declaration said, "will continue to reject all attempts to put in question the rights and responsibilities — which France, the United States, the United Kingdom and the Soviet Union retain — relating to Germany as a whole and to all four sectors of Berlin."

Jack Frost cools off spring fever

Jack Frost is still nipping at the buds, as Monday's low 32 degrees proved.

And for the anxious urban farmers who planted their tomato plants last week, the fragile sprouts will need some nighttime protection.

Potted plants should be brought in overnight, a spokesman for Klehm's Nursery in Arlington Heights said. Plants growing outside should be covered with newspaper or burlap.

THE BACKYARD garden isn't the only thing wilting under the chill. Area orchard growers have had to resort to warming techniques to preserve their budding trees.

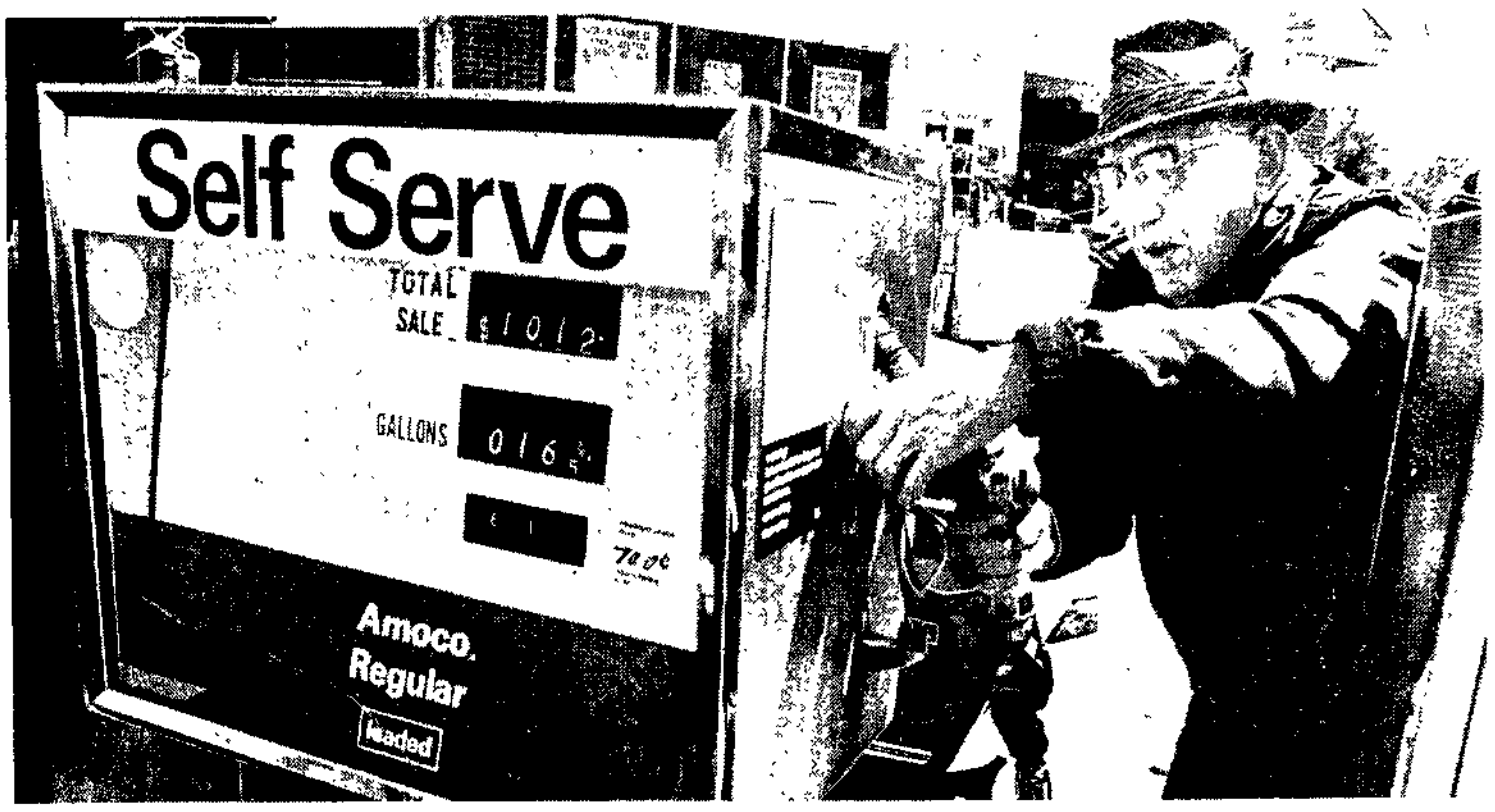

Mrs. John Bell Jr., owner of the Bell Apple Orchard in Lake Zurich, said helicopters hovered over the trees during the early morning hours this weekend to force down warm upper air. Part of the orchard's 18,000 trees are protected by underground heating, but for the remaining trees the helicopter technique is used in place of now-outlawed smudge pots, she said.

"I think we were able to keep the temperature to about 35," she said. Worse for the orchard, however, were the 22 and 27 degree readings recorded in the Lake Zurich area Thursday and Friday, she said.

"WE WILL BE concerned for at least two weeks more," Mrs. Bell said.

There is some encouraging news from the National Weather Service, though. The outlook for May shows temperatures and precipitation will be near normal, and that means 3.4 inches of rain and daily high temperatures climbing steadily to 76 degrees by the end of the month.

And if that doesn't cheer you up, consider what your tomato plants would have looked like in New England Monday. That's where a blizzard — that's right, SNOW — dumped as much as 10 inches on parts of New York, Vermont, Connecticut and Massachusetts.

STRETCHING FOR SELF-service gasoline at Crosley's Amoco in Chicago, Walt Dietz gets ready to pump his own gas for the first time Monday. Self-service stations should begin showing up in the suburbs soon, says State Fire Marshall Robert G. Walsh.

Self-serve gas opens for business

by KURT BAER

Chicago's first self-service gasoline station opened Monday but it may be mid-summer before self-service is widespread in Illinois, an oil company spokesman said.

Crosby's Amoco, 5555 N. Cumberland Ave., Chicago, began offering motorists the opportunity to fill their own tanks Monday morning after Chicago Mayor Michael Bilandic presented the station owner with the city's first permit and put $1.32 worth of gas in his car.

"It's a novelty. So far everything is going fine," station owner Tony Venturi said Monday afternoon. Business was evenly divided between the full-service and self-service pumps though gasoline was 8 cents per gallon cheaper at the self-service island, he said.

SELF-SERVICE IS still the exception rather than the norm in Illinois. But that situation should begin to change soon, according to State Fire Marshal Richard Walsh.

As of Monday, permits for 275 self-service stations in suburban Cook County had been approved pending a final field inspection by a deputy fire marshal, Walsh said.

"We're processing applications at the rate of 100 to 125 a day," he said. Dealers now have to wait about 20 days from the time they submit an application until they can expect a state permit, he said.

THERE HAVE BEEN more than 1,200 applications filed so far and the state has only 44 deputy fire marshals which makes for a situation in which "nobody's loafing," Walsh said.

Carlton Adams, spokesman for Standard Oil of Indiana (Amoco), said the decision to apply for self-service rests with the individual station operator.

Based on the number of service stations in Illinois, it could be mid-summer before self-service is widespread in the state, Adams said.

AT CROSLEY'S AMOCO, Venturini said attendants were offering to instruct customers in the art of pumping gas. But as of 2:30 p.m., he still was waiting for his first woman customer at the self-service pumps.

"Two women pulled away from the self-service to the full-service when they found out they'd have to pump it themselves," Venturini said.

He said he did not know how he came to be Chicago's first self-service station. "I took to the idea of self-service only because I thought it was inevitable. I told the company that if they did go self-service, I'd apply. I guess my application must have come in first."

Chicago's ordinance legalizing self-service gasoline sales requires that the self-serve price be at least 10 per cent lower than at the full-service pumps.

BUT IN THE SUBURBS, there is no such guarantee, and in fact in at least one location the difference between full-service and self-serve prices Monday was almost negligible.

Hauck's service station, 825 N. Main St., Glen Ellyn, was the first self-service station in the state. Monday it was selling regular gas for 57.3 cents a gallon, no lead for 60.4 and premium for 63.6.

Across the street at Village Arco, gas at the full service pump was 57.9 cents a gallon for regular and 59.9 unleaded.

Consumer clout works: gasoline exec

by LEA TONKIN

When it comes to self-serve gasoline sales, the consumer is calling the shots, says Shell Oil Co. executive Jack Shanks.

"Consumers have let us know what they want, loud and clear. They want self-serve because they can save money," said Shanks, sales manager for Shell's Chicago north district.

Price is self-serve's chief attraction for the consumer, Shanks said. The cost savings for do-it-yourself gasoline purchasers is generally estimated at 2 to 5 cents a gallon in comparison to full-service at the neighborhood pump.

THERE ARE some folks who say they like to pump their own gas for other reasons, however. Shanks said Shell consumer surveys show that many customers prefer self-serve because it's more convenient, faster, or they just like to do things for themselves.

Although self-serve is new to Illinois, Shanks said the trend has increased rapidly throughout most of the United States. Nearly half the gasoline sold in the United States is pumped by do-it-yourselfers. In some areas, such as the Rocky Mountain states, self-service accounts for 60 to 70 per cent of sales.

SHANKS SAID a majority of the Shell stations in his suburban sales territory have applied for self-serve permits from the state fire marshal's office.

In the 47 other states where self-service has been allowed for more than a year, there's a general pattern of conversion to self-serve outlets. If the pattern follows in Illinois, 30 per cent of all Illinois stations will offer self-service within one year, Shanks said. By the end of five years, 80 per cent of all the outlets probably will offer self-service.

Houdini is a disappearing alligator

by NANCY GOTLER

Houdini, the escape artist alligator, pulled a vanishing act Friday that had residents near Rand Road in unincorporated Wheeling Township counting their toes.

Houdini's owner, Charles Quirch, 28, of Ingleside, wants the reptile back and says he is willing to fight the Illinois Dept. of Conservation and U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to get it.

"I would be willing to go to court to get him back," said Quirch, who also owns a pair of six-foot boa constrictors.

After Walter Pastushyn found the 47-inch Houdini in his backyard, 1621 Clarence St., Friday while mowing his lawn, officials of the River Trail Nature Center, Northfield Township, where the reptile is being kept, discovered Houdini is an endangered American alligator.

A spokesman for the Fish and Wildlife Service office in Rosemont said the state requires a permit to keep the animal and Quirch admitted he didn't have one because he thought the reptile was the more common Cayman species.

The spokesman said if Quirch bought the animal before Dec. 28, 1973, when the Endangered Species Act went into effect, he probably could keep it.

Quirch said he keeps the reptile, which he got 4½ years ago when it was a baby, in a pool behind his home in the summer and in an indoor aquarium in the winter.

Quirch, who is staying with friends near Pastushyn's home, said the alligator was locked in a pen in the backyard but apparently the gate was unlocked and the animal crawled away.

"He'd cut you if he bit you, but he can't eat a kid or a dog," Quirch said. "I'm just worried about getting him back. He's a real conversation piece."

Man injured when train hits car

A 27-year-old Chicago man was injured Monday afternoon when the car he was driving was struck by a Soo Line R.R. freight train at a secluded crossing in Wheeling Township.

Police said Richard M. Krieger was injured at 3:44 p.m. when his car was struck by a northbound freight train. The crossing serves as an extension of Morrison Avenue, which leads to a cluster of four mobile homes and a house west of the single railroad track. Police did not say how fast the train was traveling.

The crossing, the scene of a fatal car-train accident in 1973, is marked by a single, T-shaped sign marked "Private Crossing," which is partially obscured by shrubs. The crossing is between Kensington and Central roads and west of River Road.

Mount Prospect firefighters took Krieger to Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines, where he was reported in fair condition in the intensive-care unit Monday night. A hospital official said Krieger received possible chest injuries.

Police said the engineer of the train, Howard Heimerman of Fond du Lac, Wis., told them he was approaching Morrison Avenue when he saw Krieger's car stopped on the tracks.

Krieger said he blew his horn and applied the brakes, but the train hit the car, knocking it into a ditch.

Monday's accident was similar to one which occurred June 19, 1973, in which Margaret Rogers, 62, was killed when her car apparently stalled on the track and was hit by a freight train.

Pipeline decision deadline July 1

Eight Northwest suburban communities have until July 1 to decide whether to connect with the Chicago water system or build their own pipeline to Lake Michigan.

SHARE + 3, a water resource group, set the deadline Monday as the first step in getting the lake water to the suburbs.

"The only question is where the end of the straw is," said SHARE — 3 chairman Charles Willis, village manager of Elk Grove Village.

SHARE + 3 is committed to getting water from the City of Chicago, while another group, DAMP, is concerned this will leave the Northwest suburbs at the mercy of the city.

Communities in SHARE + 3 include Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows, Elk Grove Village, Buffalo Grove, Mount Prospect and Palatine. Three of the communities, Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights and Palatine, are also members of DAMP.

Willis said the communities should either accept or reject the SHARE + 3 proposal for a pipeline to connect with Chicago's water system near O'Hare Airport.

A pipeline to O'Hare is estimated to cost $42-$62 million, while a pipeline to the lake would cost much more

Although the state will allow the Northwest suburban communities to begin using lake water in 1979, local officials don't expect a pipeline to be constructed until 1980 or 1981. Rapidly dwindling ground water is expected to be sufficient until that time.

Illinois briefs

Thompson asks lid on education fund

Gov. James R. Thompson Monday again asked the General Assembly to hold education spending down to the $125 million increase he proposed in his March budget request. Thompson, in a special message to the legislature, said no more money is available for schools and lawmakers should not try to add more to his appropriation bills. When the governor first announced his proposed school budgets early this year, educators at once denounced them as inadequate. They said he should wait to see if the economy would take an upturn before deciding how much education gets.

"The state has completed nine months of the current fiscal year," Thompson said. "There has been no evidence of significant changes in financial estimates which would alter our projections for FY78." He said he wants education budgets set by July 1 so school districts know how much money they will have to spend. Thompson chided the State Board of Education for not yet allocating his dollar recommendations to local districts. He said the board's spending priorities are not in line with school leaders' requests.

No change of venue in PCB case

Earthline Corp., which has transferred PCB-contaminated soil from Missouri to a landfill near Wilsonville, Ill., Monday was refused its request for a change of venue and judge in a suit filed by Wilsonville and Macoupin County The plaintiffs in the suit charge Earthline's industrial disposal site is a danger to Wilsonville residents. Macoupin County Circuit Court Judge John Russell Monday morning refused to grant Earthline the change of venue and judge during a pretrial hearing

Earthline has begun transporting 1,000 barrels of PCB-contaminated soil to the site from Jefferson County, Mo., under the provisions of a court order placing restrictions on the shipments. The Illinois Environmental Protection Agency has said the material would be safe underground for 600 years, but an Illinois State Geological Survey said the chemical substances could possibly leak with 20 years.

Schools, firms open after flood

Schools and factories reopened in flood ravaged Jacksonville Monday and residents were told they again could use the city's water supply without fear of contamination. Mayor Milton Hocking estimated property damage from last week's flooding at $3 million to $5 million. "We're going to submit to the state and the federal governments for some (disaster) relief," Hocking said. Lance Brock house, 8 was the only fatality of the flood spawned by a seven-inch deluge of rain which hit the city of 22,000 in a 24-hour period ending early Friday. The boy's body was recovered Saturday close to where he and three companions had been playing near the swollen Mauvaisterre Creek.

Workers protest planned mail cuts

Chicago area postal workers have collected more than 50,000 signatures on petitions protesting a proposed cut in mail deliveries from six days to five, the president of the Chicago branch of the National Assn of Letter Carriers said Monday. Union chief Charles Grant said any cutback in delivery schedules would not reduce the amount of mail delivered but mail carriers would be required to deliver six days' mail in five. The petitions were circulated in April by off-duty mail carriers in Chicago and the suburbs. They will be forwarded to local congressmen, Grant said.

Man sentenced in woman's death

Theodore Ross, 20, of Palos Heights, Monday was sentenced to serve 50 to 150 years in prison for the murder of a relative with whom he shared a mother-son relationship. Margret Abrams, 57, was stabbed 27 times and beaten to death with a wooden plank March 19, 1975 Ross, a relative by marriage to the dead woman, admitted in a statement after his arrest he had killed Mrs. Abrams

OLIVER SPURLOCK, Ross' attorney, said Ross and the woman had a "very warm mother-son relationship" and that the killing was a "motiveless, senseless action on the part of a very disturbed young man." Three psychiatrists testified during a weeklong trial last month that Ross was insane at the time of the murder.

5 years probation for Patty Hearst

trial in Los Angeles as a result of her conviction in San Francisco.

F. Lee Bailey, who led the defense team in the San Francisco trial, told the court that Miss Hearst was "punished before she was tried."

HE SAID SHE HAD no record of criminal or anti-social behavior before she was kidnaped by the SLA in February 1974. "She was brutalized and sexually attacked" by her captors, Bailey said.

"She was punished by the SLA in ways that society would not condone."

Prosecutor Samuel Mayerson also requested leniency and, as did Bailey, noted the uniqueness of the case. But unlike the defense, he requested probation with supervision.

Miss Hearst is free on $1.2 million bond while appealing a federal court conviction in San Francisco for bank robbery. She was sentenced to seven years for that offense.

She has served 371 days in jail since her arrest in San Francisco in September of 1975. Over a period of time, she has repudiated her SLA connections as well as her companions during the 1974 incident, William and Emily Harris.

The Harrises were tried separately and convicted on the same 11 counts in the original indictment against Miss Hearst and are serving 11 years-to-life sentences.

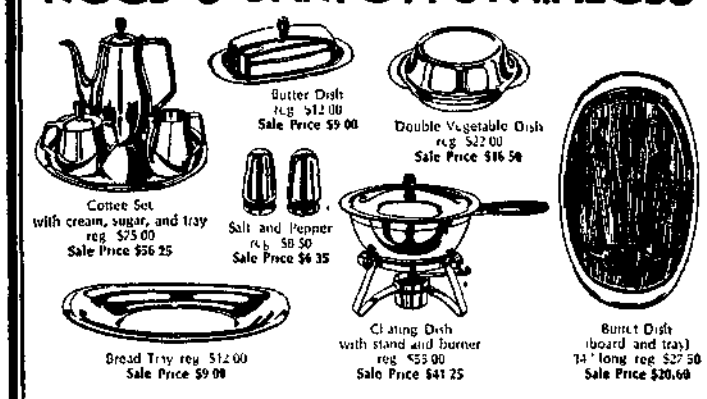

The indictment arose from a May 16, 1974, robbery of Mel's Sports Goods in Inglewood during which Miss Hearst sprayed the store front with machine gun fire to aid the Harrises' escape.

They subsequently commandeered several cars, abducted two persons and took money from them.

Village man shot by ex-employe

Police Monday charged a former employe of a supply firm with shooting an Arlington Heights man in the chest at his place of employment in Chicago

Police said the man had returned to get even with an executive of the firm for railroading him into the Army in 1969 when he shot John Olson 35 of 418 S Reuter Dr , Arlington Heights However Olson was not the intended victim police said

Charged with aggravated battery was David Walden 35 of Asheville N C , a former employe of Rexnord Inc an engineering supply firm at 1765 N Elston Ave Chicago

OLSON, THE personnel manager at the firm, was reported in fair condition Monday night in the intensive care unit of St Mary of Nazareth Hospital Chicago

Walden apparently had traveled from North Carolina to Chicago to confront the company executive for railroading him into the army' in 1969 and then testifying against him at a military court martial, said Det James Lanners Police would not identify the executive

Witnesses said Walden entered the firm and asked a receptionist where he could find the executive The receptionist told Walden the man was not in his office

Olson was coming down a stairway with four other employes when he saw Walden and recognized him, witnesses said

"WHAT DO YOU have in the bag?"

Olson asked

Walden said, 'Get out of my way and then pulled out the gun and fired, witnesses said

Several employes jumped Walden and wrestled the gun away from him

Walden was taken to the 14th District police lockup in Chicago, where he was being held Monday night awaiting a bond hearing

A preliminary hearing for Walden is scheduled for May 17 in the Cook County Criminal Courts Building, 26th Street and California Avenue Chicago

Gary Minkus, owner of Mink's Hot Dog Shop at the center, said he has been hired by Affiliated to supplement the cleaning of the parking lot

"I think some good has come out of the first article ' he said ' But we all have to realize that the merchants are only part of the problem The public also contributes to it "

ALAN WEISS, owner of Alan's Meat Shop said he thinks the compliance will be permanent this time

I think it'll stay clean because we're all aware of the problem now,' he said ' I'm having the front sidewalk swept every other day and the management's cleanup service is coming more often now "

Carl Hahn, owner of Prim Cleaners, agreed "If the health inspector stays around it will stay clean Much of the trash problem was caused because we were fed up with the landlord's bad service Now it's up to us to see that he maintains this level of service "

Mack said the village will continue to watch the area closely "We're not going to let them repeat the pattern of disrepair The tenants say they plan on cooperating but if they fall out of line the ax will fall ".

"Our aim: To fear God, tell the truth and make money."
H.C. PADDOCK, 1852 - 1935

Theater should try quality films

The management of the Meadows Theater in Rolling Meadows has announced that, at least for the time being, the theater will abandon the showing of X-rated films.

Residents of the city who have been concerned about the theater fare may well question whether the first "family" feature, "It's Alive," a cheap "thriller," is much of an improvement over the steamy sex that has prevailed in the past.

However, the theater-owner's voluntary action may well disarm those who have been planning a protest against X-rated movies. A community meeting on the subject has been scheduled for May 26 to discuss alternatives which may or may not include creation of a film review board to fight what some view as smut.

Before Rolling Meadows residents tackle the problem of trying to define obscenity and regulate it — a task that has eluded many officials — they should note their responsibility to support the kind of entertainment they want advertised on the theater's marquee.

In addition, the theater owner for his part should consider the possibility that the Northwest suburbs can and will support theaters that show quality movies and that he may be wrong in assessing the low level of audience tastes.

The current uproar over the Meadows Theatre followed stories about a Deerfield family who chose to give up their earnest money on a Rolling Meadows house after they discovered the theater. The family said they didn't want to move into a community which would allow X-rated films.

The theater owner has said he cannot afford to buy quality first-run motion pictures. Instead, he says, he buys what he can get and does better business with X-rated movies than with other films he can buy.

However, the seeming impasse between concerned citizens and the theater owner, who must as a businessman turn a profit, could be resolved if it could be shown that residents of the area would support a quality theater.

There are theaters throughout the Chicago area that operate profitably showing quality second and third-run films, sometimes for low ticket prices. The Meadows Theater has not tried that format.

If it does and fails to attract customers, the theater owner will have a strong argument for returning to X-rated movies.

However, it seems to us that this area can support a theater offering good movies and that many of those persons protesting the X-rated films would provide an audience for the theater.

Increase lot size limits

A proposed ordinance requiring new homes to be built on larger lots in Buffalo Grove is well conceived and will enhance the aesthetics of that community where thousands of housing units are planned.

The village board should adopt the ordinance as recommended by the village's plan commission.

The plan commission's proposal attempts to control the appearance and character of the burgeoning community of Buffalo Grove. Without the plan commission control and improved site requirements it is simply too easy for developers to construct row after row of large 4-bedroom houses on tiny lots.

In today's high-demand market in housing, such crowded developments are quickly sold out. Then it is too late for action.

In some areas of Buffalo Grove houses already are being constructed on lots smaller than the 6,600 square foot minimum, and the intent of the new ordinance should place developers on notice that proliferation of high density housing areas will be discouraged.

The plan commission has taken a positive step in controlling the future development in the village that is in the best interests of prospective as well as current residents of the community.

Fine, Jimmy, but I don't know if they're the most important letters in the alphabet!

Anti-boycott law opposes blackmail with decency

Paul Greenberg

By no uncertain margin (364 votes to 43) the United States House of Representatives has served notice that it is not prepared to allow foreign powers, in this case the Arab League, to tell Americans whom they may or may not trade with in order to deserve Arab business.

The anti-boycott act just passed by the House may not be strong enough, having been watered down here and there. And it gives the President power to make some exceptions. But its general import is unmistakable: Americans' businesses will no longer be allowed to comply with a boycott of other American businesses.

The Arab states, being sovereign powers, can boycott whomever they wish. But when the oildoms go beyond their primary boycott (of Israel) into secondary boycotts (of any firm doing business with Israel) and into tertiary boycotts (of any firm doing business with a firm that does business, or is suspected of sympathizing with Israel), then, well, that's a bit cheeky even for an oil shiek.

THE ORIGINAL aim of the Arab boycott — to punish Israel — has been extended to pitting Americans against each other for the almighty petrodollar. It's not only blackmail but a particularly vicious brand that moves Americans to turn informer on each other in order to curry favor with foreign buyers. Too many American firms have been willing, some have been eager, to do just that. Happily, the overwhelming majority of congressmen no longer seem willing to let this demeaning game continue.

The shoddy arguments were offered to justify bowing to blackmail. They could have been culled from any PR pronouncement from Mobil or Exxon: The Arabs will stop buying all that American technology, equipment and weaponry if Americans dare assert themselves. Billions in trade and hundreds of thousands of jobs will be wiped out and the sky is falling.

This hysteria ignored the experience of many American companies with valuable goods and services to offer, and with the guts to defy the Arab boycott. They have no difficulty selling to Arabs as well as Israelis. Their number includes General Electric, TWA, Myles Laboratories, IBM.

THE ARAB STATES apparently don't boycott companies whose products they really want. Or even countries whose products they want. France, which fell all over itself to please the Arabs during the Yom Kippur War, has chalked up no great increase in Arab sales. Little Holland, which defied the oil embargo, continues to export to Arabdom.

So does West Germany, which also declined to make over its foreign policy in the Arab image. Apparently, it is only those who can be browbeaten by the Arab boycott who will be. Which is the way blackmail usually works.

No doubt some sales will be lost if the Arab boycott is defied. But if the Arab Leabue can no longer boycott within this country, other sales may be made. Some 1,500 American firms now have the honor of being on the Arab blacklist, including Sears and Xerox.

THE ARAB MARKET might be opened to many of them if the boycott were broken and no distinctions made between American firms. And the boycott could scarcely go on if American companies stopped reporting on each other. It comes down to a matter of principle — those American firms that have refused to cooperate with a foreign boycott should be backed up by the force of American law, not exposed to economic discrimination.

Perhaps the most revealing argument made in favor of cooperating with the boycott came from Dresser Industries, a manufacturer of mining and drilling equipment and one of the Fortune 500. In a tactic that would have done credit to J. William Fulbright in his heyday, it warned that any attempt to defy the boycott would wreak havoc in the American Economy and result in a wave of anti-Semitism at home. The threat, inevitably made in a tone of genuine concern for the threatenee, illustrates how far the oil sheiks already have come in pitting Americans against each other.

But the 346 congressmen who voted for the anti-boycott act are evidence that the Arab market hasn't overwhelmed American self-respect. The Energy Crisis may have got Americans down, but not that far down. Not down enough to start turning on one another. The vote in the House would seem to say at least that much. It was an act of national solidarity, and simple decency.

JFK's term started this way

Carter 100 days hauntingly familiar

Martha Angle and Robert Walters
In Washington

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — There is something hauntingly familiar about the pattern of Jimmy Carter's triumphs and tribulations in his first hundred days as president. Could it be that we have seen this show before?

Indeed we have. Although the similarities have been largely obscured by time and the distorting fog of sentiment, Carter's performance to date bears a striking resemblance to that of John F. Kennedy at the same point in his brief administration.

Kennedy and Carter, as it happens, are the only Democrats since FDR to win the White House on their own, rather than inheriting it. Both were narrowly elected following eight years of Republican rule. Both ran independently of the regular Democratic party apparatus. Both campaigned on promises to revive a stagnant economy at home and sagging American prestige abroad.

LIKE KENNEDY, Carter has used his first three months in office to solidify and broaden his popularity with the voters. Like Kennedy, he has relied heavily on symbolic gestures and personal style to capture public affection. And like Kennedy, he has achieved a steady gain in the public opinion polls. His latest approval rating is 72 per cent — precisely the same as Kennedy's at a comparable period.

At the end of his first hundred days, Kennedy had managed to get only four pieces of legislation through a Congress even more heavily Democratic than the one Carter must deal with: temporary unemployment aid, a feed grains program, extension of the Sugar Act, and a revival of lapsed authority for government reorganization.

THE CARTER record on Capitol Hill? Virtually identical. At this writing, only four Carter bills have been signed into law: an emergency natural gas measure, emergency drought legislation, repeal of the Byrd amendment which had permitted U.S. imports of Rhodesian chrome in violation of UN sanctions, and — how little things change — renewed authority for government reorganization.

Kennedy suffered an early humiliating foreign policy setback with the calamitous Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba; Carter saw the SALT talks collapse as the Russians angrily rejected his first major foreign policy offering. Yet neither president experienced any loss of prestige or popular support at home.

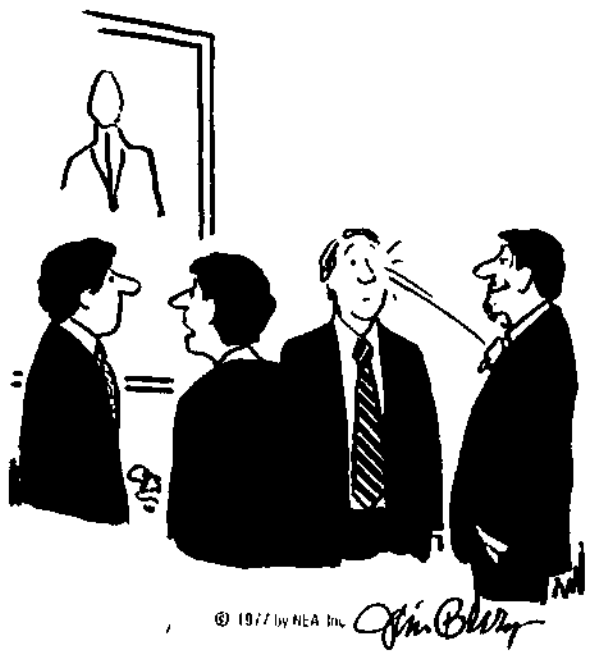

Thus far, Carter's substantive accomplishments do not begin to equal the changes he has wrought in the public mood. The faint stirrings of hope he has inspired that this president can actually make a difference will quickly curdle into even deeper voter disillusionment unless Carter succeeds in making Congress his "partner" in reality as well as rhetoric as he presses his sweeping new energy policy, tax and welfare reform, government reorganization and other promised programs.

IN THE WORDS of Kennedy's inaugural address, none of this will be finished in the first hundred days, nor the first thousand days. And indeed, there is no reason to expect such speed in this era.

No president before or since has ever approached the astonishing record of FDR's first hundred days, for the simple reason that the nation has never so desperately needed the kind of leadersip Roosevelt provided in the depths of the Depression when he convinced a panic-stricken people that we truly had nothing to fear but fear itself.

'Tax theater out of town'

I read with interest Mrs. Wade's letter in the Fence Post about the Rolling Meadows Theater. I also am a 20-year resident and have found the offerings of the theater very offensive. One time several years ago I remember launching a great attack against the theater in the pages of the Fence Post. It went back and forth for several months with people saying it was their right to see what movies they wanted and people such as myself had no business objecting to that right. It was quite obvious at that time that the mangement had no intention of cleaning up their X-rated movies.

However, now I think perhaps Mrs. Wade has touched upon the way the people of Rolling Meadows who object to the bill of fare at the Meadows can voice their objections and perhaps get something constructive done about it. We have a new city manager and several new aldermen and if all the people in Rolling Meadows who object to the theater's films would send a note to their local aldermen our city council could take some form of action against the management.

Perhaps this could be in the form of a large tax on all theaters in Rolling Meadows that would make it unprofitable for the show to keep operating. If such a tax were levied the theater management could move its offerings to another community without such a tax and I'm sure most residents would say good riddance. Those people in town who still want to see these movies could drive a little farther to see them and our downtown area would be rid of the X-rated theater marquee that causes 9-year-olds to ask why they can't see "Cinderella" or "Snow White" and causes adults to judge our town's morality by its theater marquee.

He lost his vote

Shame on you, Kathryn Graham, for having the audacity to present yourself to the voters of Arlington Heights as candidate for the position of village trustee.

Shame on you for duping some 3,000 odd voters (without the aid of any campaign bankroll or large political endorsement) into believing that you would conduct yourself as a public official truly dedicated to being representative to all the citizens of the village.

Shame on you for believing that a margin of 50 or so votes, as cast and counted by your fellow citizens on election day, would withstand the rigors of a "recount" a month later. Every American knows our system of checks and balances would unearth any fraud or incompetence.

That's why it is so shameful, dear Kathryn, to think that so many of our election workers would be so incompetent, or even so dishonest as to have thrown the margin of victory to you with legally counted ballots on election night. Even the Paddock newspaper states that nobody gained votes in the recount, just some of yours were "invalid."

On second thought, Mrs. Graham, win or lose, the shame is not upon you. Nor is it even on those who might profit by the outcome.

But if you think for one minute that those fellow citizens who rose at ungodly hours to sit on uncomfortable chairs, and suffer countless inconveniences, and insufferable politicians, and hovering, disrupting so called poll watchers, for the paltry sum that was their pay will now blithely agree that they made a "little" error of 50 odd votes and let it go at that —then that's shameful!!

And along with about 50 other voters who supported you who have now been disenfranchised, I can only say to the election board who will be seeking workers for the next election day, don't call me, and you can be sure I won't call you.

'Doctors needed'

In regards to your article published April 25 "Doctor leaves area's mass medicine for small town:"

I recently left Northwest Community Hospital as staff nurse-to live in a community of 1,056 people and to work in a 51-bed hospital in the town of Mansfield, Mo. Most of the people travel 45 miles to the nearest large town for medical help. There is one D.O. who practices here and an M.D. who practices 15 miles away. We have one semi-retired dentist in his 70's. I wish our town was as lucky to get a good medical doctor, surgeon or even a gynecologist.

U.S. Steel takes tough approach on price hikes with 6% increase

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — United States Steel, the nation's No. 1 producer, Monday undercut other firms and held to a 6 per cent price increase.

U.S. Steel's announcement virtually assured a rollback in the 7 per cent boost on bar steel and the 9 per cent increase on flat-rolled steel announced Friday by Republic Steel and Youngstown Sheet & Tube.

The higher steel prices mean consumers eventually will pay more for items such as automobiles, refrigerators and everyday household products, government economists said.

A WHITE HOUSE economist said the increases probably would raise the wholesale price index by between 0.1 and 0.2 per cent.

"We're encouraged by something closer to 6 per cent than the 7-9 per cent we've been hearing about," said Robert Crandall, acting director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability. "We hope that U.S. Steel's prices stick."

President Carter, through his press secretary in London, said the 7-9 per cent boosts on flat-rolled and bar steel announced Friday by two smaller firms were "unwarranted." He called on top producers to exercise restraint.

U.S. STEEL said it was raising prices an average of 6 per cent on flat-rolled steel — used in auto and appliance manufacture — and on bar, rod and plate products.

Other top producers, such as No. 2 ranked Bethlehem Steel, said they were studying the latest pricing news. Republic and Youngstown, Ohio, which led off the pricing actions Friday, declined comment on U.S. Steel's move.

Crandall said some increase was "inevitable." Given the unfavorable "price-cost situation" in steel manufacturing, he said, "we were prepared to hear something in the 5 to 6 per cent range."

A U.S. Steel spokesman said Chairman Edgar Speer probably notified the White House of the exact amount of the increase during a breakfast meeting last Thursday with Budget Director Bert Lance, Treasury Sec. Michael Blumenthal and chief economic advisor Charles Schultze.

Asked whether the administration persuaded Speer to hold down the increases, the U.S. Steel spokesman replied:

"We weren't there to negotiate."

THE PRICE OF flat-rolled steel has risen about 18 per cent in 12 months.

White House economic sources said the situation was "a little awkward" last December when Carter, then the president-elect, attempted to "jawbone" the steel industry into rolling back a 6 per cent increase on flat rolled steel.

"We had, in effect, two presidents then," he said. "But we've done our homework this time."

Carter's inflation policy, announced April 15, called for voluntary restraint by industry as an alternative to price controls.

U.S. Steel, in its announcement, said the increases were necessary because of the recently negotiated wage agreement with the United Steelworkers and the increasing costs of fuels and other production materials.

"What do you mean Accounting has an unlisted number?"

U.S. economic 'weather' improving

NEW YORK — The U.S. economic weather forecast shows a brightening trend ahead for most of the nation while cloudy conditions continue in Washington.

Areas of sunshine are spreading and by now it is becoming obvious to anybody who is not actively myopic, or George Meany, that the U.S. economy is resuming a vigorous recovery. The next six to nine months should show strong improvement.

Winter snows have melted and with them, the retardation of growth brought on by the severe freeze and drought (though not all the price rises they induced will melt away so quickly).

Electrical storms are brewing around President Carter's energy program. If enacted, it will be a net minus. Congress senses this, even if it hasn't quite grasped the reason why.

By increasing prices through taxes, President Carter lifts the controls without lifting profits. This would be the worst of both worlds, since it raises prices and lowers incentives.

Among clouds not dispersing is inflation. As the President has now acknowledged, it's going to be worse than he predicted this year. With well over $100 billion to be added to the national debt this year and next, the outlook is cloudy even for his puny goal of reducing the rate of increase in the Consumer Price Index to 4 per cent by the end of 1979.

Despite the basically positive outlook for industrial production and jobs, the unemployment cold front will not break. Indeed, the misunderstanding of the problem grows. Today's unemployment is primarily structural, caused by changing social patterns (vastly more women seeking work) and incentives not to work built in by the politicians (liberal unemployment benefits).

Uncomfortable humidity will cause the financial community to continue to sweat it out. It unmistakably has the jitters about Carter. The stock market has had a jagged performance, in a year it might well have been reaching for the stars. The continued lack of the long-awaited "capital spending boom," which would expand plants and increase hiring, also has people concerned.

Many businessmen have been holding back, even though they are utilizing more and more of their available capacity and see rising inventories and sales. The man makes them nervous — not panicky yet, but nervous.

There is still much to praise. The cyclical recovery from the 1974-75 recession is expanding, and will provide more jobs, more take-home pay — and, if inflation is not totally unleashed, more confidence.

Carter will also profit from on-the-job training about energy. The country is ready for intelligent conservation, but also needs action to build supplies.

Cyclone warnings show winds of hurricane force expected to continue in Washington. The rest of the country is looking a little calmer and happier.

Dow Jones loses 3.65 in slow trade

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks fell Monday in the slowest trading session of the year of New York Stock Exchange issues as investors, finding little at the London economic summit to ease higher-interest-rate fears, stayed on the sidelines.

Wall Street was disturbed that a recent surge in the nation's basic money supply would cause the Federal Reserve Board to tighten credit further than it did last week and cause interest rates to rise.

Investors ignored a National Assn. of Purchasing Management survey showing members' optimism about the economy was at a four-year high and that unemployment was at a 29-month low.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 6.70 points Friday, fell another 3.65 points to 933.09. The closely watched average gained 9.84 points last week, despite Friday's loss, and had risen about 30 points in two weeks.

Carter urges hike in security taxes

President Carter Monday proposed using $14.1 billion in general tax revenues to keep the Social Security fund solvent, and will seek increased contributions to the system from both employers and workers. Faced with a report showing Social Security's cash reserves could be depleted by the early 1980s, Carter suggested the unprecedented use of general revenues to ensure the nation's 33.4 million elderly and disabled continue receiving payments. Carter also proposed that employers pay Social Security taxes on all worker wages beginning in 1979. They now are taxed only on the first $16,500 of an individual's pay. Carter also plans to ask Congress to increase Social Security taxes on workers. Workers now pay Social Security taxes on the first $16,500. That base alread7 is scheduled to rise to $18,900 in 1979, and Carter's proposal would increase it to $19,500. These employe tax increases would raise $4 billion.

Higher price asked on Alaska oil

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, said Monday if the new oil scheduled to start flowing from his state later this year is not priced high enough he will try to "prevent its being produced." Stevens' warning came at a Senate energy subcommittee hearing at which Federal Energy Administrator John O'Leary proposed that Alaskan oil be priced at about $7.50 per barrel at the point of production. High pipeline and shipping costs would put the oil at $13.50 at the refinery, he said. Oil from long-established domestic wells costs $5.25, with some at $11.28. Foreign oil sells for about $13.50. O'Leary said the $7.50 price is a good incentive for producers but not enough to provide a windfall.

Engineers urged to save energy

Calling on U.S. engineers to squeeze energy efficiency out of new and existing industrial plants, Federal Energy Deputy Administrator David Bardin Monday addressed a convention gathering in Chicago's McCormick Place. Professionals who design and manage industrial plants are a key element in the Carter Administration's energy conservation plans, Bardin told participants in the American Society of Mechanical Engineers' Design Engineering Conference and the Plant Engineering and Maintenance Conference.

Nixon Viet note subpoena hinted

A congressional committee chairman said Monday he may subpoena Richard Nixon if the former president does not produce a letter promising U.S. reconstruction aid for Vietnam. "If he can talk to a television guy, he can talk to the Congress," said Rep. Lester Wolff, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Subcommittee on Asian and Pacific Affairs, referring to Nixon's interviews with David Frost. Wolff told reporters that Nixon, while president, wrote a letter promising $4.75 billion in reconstruction aid to Vietnam.

Wolff said he has written Nixon asking him about the letter. If Nixon fails to respond, Wolfe said, he may subpoena him. Richard Holbrooke, assistant secretary of state for Eastern and Pacific Affairs, testified before the subcommittee that he was trying to have the Nixon letter made public. He said it is among Nixon's presidential papers and not in the State Department files.

Carter slates NATO muscle plan

President Carter will propose today a sweeping program to beef up the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and promote a "two-way street" of arms production and purchases, diplomatic sources said Monday. The sources said Carter will urge NATO defense ministers to start work immediately on a program to develop the alliance's defense planning well into the 1980's. The program proposed by Carter would allow full scope for America's allies to join in the development, production and procurement of arms to remove criticism about U.S. domination in this field.

The sources said Carter will urge the allies to coordinate their defense programs more closely in order to cut out overlapping and waste. U.S. Defense Secretary Harold Brown will take detailed proposals amplifying on Carter's suggestions to the meeting of NATO defense ministers in Brussels next week. The sources said Carter will urge the defense ministers to elaborate a full program in time for NATO's spring meeting next year, which he reportedly said might also advantageously be held at summit level.

Energy beam story true: magazine

Aviation Week and Space Technology magazine told President Carter Monday the Defense Department vouched for the accuracy of its story that the Russians are developing an energy beam that could destroy U.S. nuclear missile warheads. A Pentagon spokesman denied that officials confirmed the truth of the story. Other defnse sources said objections to the story were made on the grounds that its detailed, technical information might reveal U.S. intelligence gathering secrets. Aviation Week, which has extensive sources in the military-industrial complex, reported a week ago that the Soviet Union is developing "a charged particle beam designed to destroy U.S. intercontinental and submarine-launched ballistic missile nuclear warheads." The Buck Rogers device was described as using an explosive charge, possibly nuclear, to drive particles through a magnetic field, changing the particles into a beam of almost pure energy. The magazine said an object hit by the beam would absorb its energy and explode.

Oklahoma OKs death by drugs

The Oklahoma House voted final legislative approval Monday of a bill providing for the execution of criminals by injection of lethal drugs instead of by the electric chair. The bill goes to Gov. David Boren, who is expected to sign it into law. Under a joint House-Senate committee version, the state would return to use of the electric chair if the courts struck down the death by injection provisions. If both electrocutions and drug injections were overruled by judges, the state would employ a firing squad for executions.

The bill's supporters said lethal drugs are a more humane method of executing criminals. Opponents said too much attention is being given to convicts who showed little mercy for their victims. State Rep. John Monks said the state should rely on electrocutions until and unless the lethal drug method is upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Score feared dead in hotel fire

A daybreak fire raged through a tourist hotel in Amsterdam Monday, creating an inferno of collapsing floors that killed at least six persons and left nearly a score of others missing and feared buried in still smoking ruins. Police spokesman Thigs van Leeuwen said six persons were dead and 18 missing in the Polen Hotel. "That leaves 81 survivors at present," Leeuwen said. "There were 105 guests in the hotel." None was identified.

Chief Inspector Jan Veenstra told a news conference, "It has to be feared a number of them (the missing) are under the rubble in which our search will continue all night."

Zaire reports rebels in retreat

Zaire radio Monday said rebel invaders are in full retreat and urged them to look for refuge because their "days are over." "The bloody expansionist Soviet mercenaries are in continuous retreat," the radio said. "Their days are over. It is high time for them to seek a refuge of peace and stability." There was no further explanation by the government-controlled Voice of Zaire radio and it was not clear if the rebels, former Katanga rebels who invaded Shaba province from Angola two months ago, were being offered peace talks. What the "refuge" might be also was not explained.

On-ground training, tests keep pilots flying high

by PAUL GORES

Several times each week as many as 200 persons trust their lives to J. Vincent Swinney of Arlington Heights.

Even though they don't know First Officer Swinney or the other members of the United Air Lines DC-8 crew, the passengers trust the crew to fly them safely and swiftly to their destination.

There's no other way to do it. The passengers must trust the pilots and crew, and the pilots and crew must perform as expected by the passengers. All their lives depend on it.

"A PILOT WOULD DO anything he could to keep someone from even hurting a finger on one of his flights," said Swinney, 42, who evenly divides flying time with the captain of the DC-8.

Swinney has been with United Air Lines for 15 years. Like about 75 per cent of the pilots who fly jumbo airliners, he came to commercial airlines from the military.

He said it is a "military type" of discipline in the cockpit and intensive trainng and retraining that makes flying the world's safest way to travel.

"It takes an awful lot of work to get there (the cockpit of jumbo jet)," Swinney said. "You have to know the aircraft like a doctor knows the human body."

AS THE FIRST officer in the DC-8, Swinney is second in command on the flight. He and the captain each must be equally knowledgeable about the aircraft they are flying.

The pilot's complete knowledge of the aircraft is demanded not only by the Federal Aviation Administration, but by the airline itself. Swinney said United demanded a seven-week training course on a DC-6 as part of his pilot's training.

"It was six days a week, eight to 10 hours a day," Swinney said of the training session. "In addition you had to use about eight hours of your time to study. It was very strenuous."

J. Vincent Swinney

Swinney flew as a flight engineer on a DC-6, and like all pilots, advanced through the seniority system. After advancing from the DC-6 to a Boeing 727, where he spent five years as a flight engineer, he received a first-officer's bid on the DC-8.

THE SENIORITY SYSTEM is the only way for a pilot to move toward the designation of captain. Swinney said it is every pilot's dream to earn the FAA's Airline Transport Pilot Rating and become a captain. He called the rating the "Ph.D. of flying."

The FAA requires a passenger jet pilot to retire on his 60th birthday. Only through retirement, accident or medical reasons does a captain's job open up.

Swinney said any pilot can attain the rank of captain if he is determined and waits. But Martin Blackwood, an inspector for the FAA's O'Hare Airport office in Des Plaines, said working through the seniority system is sometimes a painful experience.

"It's not all gravy, there's a lot of grief with it, too," Blackwood said. "They start out with the worst flights. You work your way up to the top of that flight and then you start all over at the tail end of the line on a bigger flight and work your way up again. They do this all the way up."

Along the way, the FAA requires the pilot to earn a commercial pilot's license, instrument rating, flight engineer and copilot training and a medical certificate. Any serious or chronic illness may be cause for grounding a pilot or limiting his chances of ever working from the cockpit of a jumbo jet.

ONCE A PILOT HAS graduated to a passenger jet, his training never stops. The FAA requires a proficiency check every six months. For United pilots, the check takes place at Stapleton Field in Denver.

"It's two days of intensive, tension type situations as you sit in a simulated cockpit," Swinney said. He called the simulated cockpit "the most realistic thing you've ever seen."

"They throw everything at you," Swinney said. "The engines are cut, the landing gear won't go down, everything short of a wing falling off."

FAA and company inspectors watch as the pilot reacts to each emergency.

SWINNEY SAID PILOTS memorize the layout and function of every system in the aircraft they fly. With the help of FAA controllers, they are responsible for choosing the safest, smoothest route to a destination.

Much of the navigating function of the pilot can be handled by an automatic pilot-type of mechanism called an Inertia Navigation System.

"I can take off from Chicago, throw a switch, and the aircraft will take me to within one-fifth mile of an airport in Honolulu," Swinney said. "It (the INS) makes its own corrections, it always tells me where I am, the ground speed, wind velocity, where you are and how you can get there."

SWINNEY SAID THERE are two INS's in each over-water aircraft. They are operated simultaneously as a cross check.

"Every pilot has a desire to know everything about the aircraft," Swinney said.

Swinney said the amount of study and training necessary to become a pilot "is well worth it." He said an average of $55,000 annually for an airline pilot is a "very conservative figure." Swinney said the captain of a 747 draws the top flying salary, close to $100,000 a year.

SEINNEY SAID O'HARE Airport is the safest in the world, one reason he chose to live here.

Swinney said he had a close call with a mid-air collision several years ago. He said it took "evasive action" to keep from running into a small aircraft flying at the same altitude.

He said although the "first reaction is to focus on the pilot" when an air disaster has occurred, the cause can never be pinpointed to one person or thing.

"AS FAR AS I KNOW there has never been a crash caused by one single incident," Swinney said. "It's always a series of little incidents."

"To me it isn't work, it's an enjoyable endeavor," he said. "Each day is something different. You have that desire to fly what you've never flown before or go where you've never been before. I would say that is probably a good description of the breed. You couldn't do it just for the money. It would drive you crazy."

Hospitals set for disaster at O'Hare

a mass casualty patient is at any time in the hospital, whether it be the emergency room, X-ray, surgery or a recovery area," he says.

Each victim is identified by a tag at the time he is brought into the hospital. A portion of the tag, which shows where the patient is being treated, is dropped into a special "mailbox" put up in the hospital during mass casualty alerts. Messengers collect the ID tags and deliver them to the data control center, where the patient's identity, injury and location in the hospital are logged.

"If we are unable to get the patient's name, we'll use a description of the person," Wilke says.

ANY MAJOR airline disaster at or near O'Hare almost certainly would involve Civil Defense forces, now called the Illinois Emergency Disaster Agency.

"Civil defense is not a separate agency. It is local government doing what it normally does only under emergency conditions," says John Fascia, mutual aid regional coordinator for the state agency.

Many Cook County communities have a mutual aid agreement for their Civil Defense units, similar to the mutual aid pacts between Northwest suburban fire departments.

FASCIA ESTIMATES there are 5,000 to 10,000 Civil Defense volunteers who could be called upon in Cook County, in addition to regular police and firefighters.

"Our emergency plans are primarily geared to operations — not incidents," he says. "That is, we do not have an air crash plan, or a tornado plan, or a snow storm plan. We are prepared to answer the needs of the communities whether it be for traffic control, auxiliary police, or communications."

Primary rescue responsibility at O'Hare belongs to the Chicago police and firefighters stationed at the airport. "We would take our information from them," says Fascia, "but we also have communications with the FAA and transportation officials."

Disaster plans for hospitals are a sober fact of life. "We are sitting in a very strategic area for potential disasters," says Nelson. "O'Hare, the railroad and the industry in the area, all are sources of possible casualties."

A hospital disaster plan, Wilke says, is a lot like insurance. You hope that you never have to use it. But you cannot afford to live without it.

VICTIMS OF THE DEC. 27, 1968, jet crash at O'Hare Airport are treated in the waiting room at Resurrection Hospital on Chicago's Far Northwest Side after the hospital's emergency room was filled.

Crash lawsuits involve many

tion section, said the average case is settled within three years.

Corboy, however, contends that airlines sometimes delay settlements for "economic" reasons.

MALONEY DISAGREES. "My attitude is to settle as quickly as possible," he said. "With inflation the way it's been, it's far more expensive to settle a case that is older. Every case that I've had that's laid around has always cost more to settle.

"ALSO, THE QUICKER the public can forget about (a crash), the better," he added.

The complexities of determining a victim's loss can be exacting. The crippling of a young woman or the death of a young man with a family likely would bring higher settlements than the death of an elderly person, for example.

For an attorney in the position of representing an airline, that can be the hardest part of air litigation, Maloney admitted.

"For example, I don't really like to take widows' depositions," he said. "The most disturbing thing is to see the situation of a young man who has left a widow and small children.

"You almost have to be a little impersonal," he added. "Personally, they're all tragedies."

HEIDI SCHULZ, Palatine, hand punched the design in this jade green pigskin gaucho ensemble. Heidi is a sophomore student in the School of Fashion Design at Harper College.

CROCHET TRIM on her white gauze sundress was matched in macrame by Heidi Schulz to lace her sandals. All accessorizing for the Harper fashion show is done by the student designers.

FOR MOONLIGHT nights, this lemon jersey gown with matching cape was designed by Teppi Dachman of Northbrook. Teppi is a sophomore student at Harper College. The public will be able to view the Harper fashions Friday evening in Building A on the campus.

WHITE EYELET, a favorite for the coming summer season, was used by Liz Macchia, a freshman from Palatine, to create this strapless harem ensemble.

WARMEST TRICK on the runway was the loopy synthetic fur ski suit created and modeled by Kimberly Knott of Arlington Heights. Kim is a freshman design student.

Harper students show some innovative ideas in fashion designs

Opulent fabrics, embroidered looks, romantic touches, creative shapes and a flair for fashion that goes beyond plain sewing characterize the efforts of students of Harper College School of Fashion Design.

Each spring, after classes in pattern making, draping, tailoring, fashion illustration and merchandising, the students put on a show of innovative fashion ideas that rivals those staged by name designers of Paris, Rome and New York City.

In all, there were more than 250 ensembles paraded last month before a panel of fashion experts who found judging a difficult task. Nearly 150 of these fashions will be modeled for the public this Friday evening at 8 when the school presents its annual show in the College Center Lounge Building A on the campus.

SELECTIONS WERE also shown at a press show last week in The Arts Club of Chicago and in Itasca Country Club for Arlington Heights Woman's Club's annual spring luncheon.

Students will model for the faculty Thursday and that evening freshmen will show their creations to Mount Prospect Business and Professional Woman's Club which again is offering scholarships to deserving students.

Arlington Heights Woman's Club presented the school with a $300 scholarship. Also offering a scholarship is Rolling Meadows Rotary Club which will see the show next Monday.

A TWO-YEAR PROGRAM, the fashion design course is in its eighth year at Harper. After graduation many students find positions with prominent designers. Some go into merchandising, serve as fashion coordinators or go on to study further at the fashion design school of The Art Institute of Chicago or at Parsons School of Design in New York City.

Co-ordinators of the Harper fashion design faculty are Chieko Nambu, fashion design, and Jo Hopkins Deutsch, fashion promotion.

Casual outfits given a fresh look

SPORTSWEAR highlights — What can the fashion designers come up with to give a casual outfit a fresh look?

One answer is the way Faded Glory combines denim and cotton mesh in a jeans and pull-over top duo. The front and rear pockets of the denim jeans are inset with a pin-check pattern. The cotton mesh pull-over is trimmed with a contrast color top, which extends into an over-sized pocket flap.

The outfit is designed for the young swinger who likes to get away from conventional clothes.

Harry Juster

READERS ASK:

Dear Mr. Juster: I bought an Indian Madras cloth sport shirt and my mother noticed the label reads, "Guaranteed to Bleed." She said that if this means it must be dry cleaned and can't be washed, I should return it. Please advise. —W.H.

There's no need to take the shirt back. Indian Madras fabrics can be washed. "Bleeding" means the colors will run together after washing, but, in this case, that's considered a desirable feature. Pure vegetable dye colorings are used and washing creates unusual color effects. However, to protect other garments from this bleeding, it's best to wash the shirt separately.

Dear Mr. Juster: Occasionally, I wear a black tie and yellow shirt with a tan summer suit.

Invariably, someone will say that it looks like I am in mourning. I happen to feel a black tie is good with this suit. am I right or wrong? —C.B.

Right. With a dark suit, a black tie would have that "in-mourning" look. However, with a tan suit and a yellow shirt, the over-all look is light and a black tie furnishes a needed contrast. A black-yellow pocket handkerchief would be a good addition, too.

Dear Mr. Juster: This may not be a fashion question, but possibly you have an answer. Our cat curls up next to us while we are watching television and our clothes get covered with fur. Sometimes, the fur is difficult to remove, and we wonder if there is something more effective than brushing? —Mrs. E.

One method is using a strip of adhesive tape, as the stubborn hairs will cling to it. To avoid sticky fingers, get one of the "roller" tapes on the market. These have a handle, making it easy to skim over clothes or furniture.

FOOT NOTE — If there ever was a question on whether it pays to invest in good quality, proper fitting shoes, consider this statistical gem: A man of average weight, walking two miles a day, puts a total weight of 49,000 tons on his shoes annually.

The doctor says

Depression sufferer needs outside help

I hope you can help me, because the way I feel now, it's not worth living. Some years ago I had headaches and crying spells. It was called a depression. I took pills for that and was all right until recently.

I moved into a new home and fixed everything the way I wanted it, but now I cry all the time and I don't feel at home. What causes a depression? Please tell me what I can do about it. I am 64 years old.

You are far ahead of most people with similar disorders. You know what you have and have some understanding of it. Depression is a common disorder and it occurs with varying degrees of severity.

You should get some help. Go see your doctor and let him guide you. People with a depression are often unable to really help themselves. Someone outside often needs to take the initiative. Medicines, some of which you have had before, are very helpful in such a situation and you may profit with some professional counseling to help you cope with the underlying factors that may cause you to have a depression.

What causes a depression? Authorities have different theories about it. If I were to single out one factor, it would be the individual's own dependent nature. All of us have some degree of dependency, and need support from family, friends or church.

The person prone to depression tends to be more dependent and is less able to tolerate the stresses of life. He may need a greater amount of assurance. When the assurance from his job situation or family disappears, depression may follow. This may be precipitated by loss of an important family member who filled part of the dependency needs.

DEPRESSION IS often associated with anger directed toward one's self. The guilt reaction and sense of lack of worth may be made worse by sympathetic understanding. That is why the "friend in need" neighborly act may not be helpful at all in such a complicated situation. It takes a professional to determine whether stern realism or sympathetic understanding is really needed in any given case.

A change in environment, including moving into a new house or a change in job situations may precipitate a depression in a person who has the dynamics to have one. I am not too surprised that you identify this event with your depression.

Don't be secretive about your problem. Ask your family to help you and let them know you need some professional help to recover as soon as possible. The sooner you get competent help the quicker you will be back to your normal self. Some individuals may feel ill and think they have some serious disease of the body when in fact they have a depression. The aches and pains of digestive complaints may all be manifestations of depression. A physician has to be alert to this possibility to provide proper treatment.

Does your personality type increase your chances of having a heart attack? Avocado picked hard to facilitate shipping

Dear Dorothy: It often takes days for avocados to soften enough for us to eat. Why don't the growers pick them when they're more mature? Also, how come avocado is so high in calories and yet has no cholesterol? —Lucille Canning

It's always mature when harvested — but in a hard mature condition for shipping. Most people leave them on kitchen counters to ripen, some put 'em in paper bags, some even in the flour bin. The avocado is high in calories because of the high oil content, but the pluses are significant. In addition to no cholesterol, it has no sodium and it's high in potassium, both important for those on low-sodium diets. The cholesterol and calorie trade-offs are intriguing. Take shrimp: high in cholesterol, low in calories. Not much we can do but accept these vagaries in food.

Dear Dorothy: Stored some onions in a plastic bowl and now can't get the odor out. I also have a few other good plastic bowls that have odors I can't remove. Soaking in baking soda didn't help. Know anything that will? —Mrs. Margaret Kieta

I soak such things in an enzyme presoak solution for a day or two. Invariably, they come out stain-and odor-free.

Dear Dorothy: This may help Mrs. Louis J. Kesten Jr., who was having trouble getting cakes out of the pan. I melt about one tablespoon of shortening, then stir in about three-fourths tablespoon flour and while still warm, using a pastry brush, brush the bottom and a little way up the sides of the pan. No more problems. The sides of any cake can be loosened with the back side of a knife. Leaving the upper part of the pan ungreased gives the batter a better chance to "climb." —Mrs. Alma Heuer

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes any hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to Dorothy Ritz in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

Local DAR to hear state regent

HAPPY WITH THE GIFT she received at Arlington Heights Woman's Club luncheon last week is Bea Beckley, member of the Arlington club and also first vice president of Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs. Bea's tablemate is Donna Hartley, club member and president of Seventh District who announced that she will be resigning her post in June. Donna and her husband, Myron, will be moving to Scottsdale, Ariz. The spring luncheon was held in Itasca Country Club.

Mrs. Roland C. White, state regent of the Illinois Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR), will speak at the annual luncheon meeting of Signal Hill Chapter to be held at Barrington Hills Country Club Tuesday, May 17. The event begins at 11 a.m.

Installation of officers will follow Mrs. White's discussion of "Landmarks of National Society DAR" and reports from Continental Congress. Mrs. White has contributed to DAR on local, state and national levels. As newly elected state regent, she will visit each of the 124 chapters in Illinois.

Mrs. David Underwood is luncheon chairman. Anyone wishing information regarding DAR membership may call Mrs. James Figg, 359-3020.

Juniors to banquet

The annual spring banquet of the Palatine Junior Woman's Club will take place Tuesday, May 17, at 6:30 p.m. at Itasca Country Club. As program Ileene Abrams will present her one-woman show, "Laughing with Ileene."

Installation of officers is also on the agenda. Those to be installed are Judy Juhl, president; Ann Kivi, vice president; Kathy Hogan and Carol Lashin, secretaries; and Jeanne Erickson, treasurer.

Further information is available by calling 358-6278.

Catholic women to meet

District 3 of Vicariate I, Archdiocesan Council of Catholic Women (ACCW), will hold its annual spring meeting Tuesday, May 17, at 7:30 p.m. at St. Colette's Parish, Grouse Lane and Meadow Drive, Rolling Meadows.

District 3 includes parishes in Arlington Heights, Elk Grove Village, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Rolling Meadows, Hoffman Estates, Schaumburg, Hanover Park, Bartlett and Prospect Heights.

Parish presidents will report on programs and accomplishments of the past year relating to ACCW commissions. All parish moderators, officers, chairmen and interested members are encouraged to attend.

Founder's Day banquet

The 10th annual Northern District Founder's Day banquet for Epsilon Sigma Alpha International (ESA), sponsored by the Illinois State Council, was held May 1 at the Sheraton Inn-Walden, Schaumburg. Dorothy Latko of Hoffman Estates and her chapter, Gamma Theta, hostessed the event.

Happenings

Illinois State Council president Pat Merideth of Champaign gave the Founder's Day message and presented Gov. James Thompson's proclamation honoring the founding of the sorority. An awards program followed with awards chairman Leanna Wu presenting the 1976-77 Woodfield Area Council awards: philanthropy to Gamma Theta, and rushing and attendance to Delta Pi.

Among Woodfield Area Council officers installed were Judy Struck, Hanover Park, president; Diane Pearce, Schaumburg, corresponding secretary; Dorothy Latko, educational director. Georgia Miller, Arlington Heights, is junior past president.

Major philanthropy of ESA is St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn., the hospital founded by Danny Thomas for research into catastrophic childhood diseases, including leukemia. A floor of the hospital is dedicated to ESA International for its contribution of $1 million. The sorority has committed itself to raise a second million.

Major fund raising event for St. Jude's is the annual Teenagers' March. In October, ESA chapters Gamma Theta and Beta Nu will co-sponsor the seventh annual march. Adults willing to assist in the march may call Dorothy Latko, 885-4339.

For working wives it's still 'his' pay or 'ours'

Wives who work tend to think of all family income as either "his" or "ours," despite the fact that they are breadwinners, too.

They still consult their husbands before spending their own earnings, says Madeline Oden, assistant director of research for a New York City advertising agency.

Women still feel their men are the head of the house, that his money pays the bills, she said in an interview.

"We believe the working wife uses half or more of the money she earns to bring her family up to the life-style it had five to 10 years ago."

Mrs. Oden says she obtained this information from focus groups in a technique widely used by market research firms and ad agencies to help their own staffs and clients plan ads and evaluate ad programs.

UNLIKE QUESTION and answer surveys, focus groups permit consumers to express their views in their own words, on their own terms. Moderators try to keep them on the subject without influencing their reactions in any way. Participants in the Compton Advertising groups include both blue and white collar families with incomes in the $12,000-$25,000 a year range.

Mrs. Oden, a working wife herself, said the women say they spend any extra money on their families, for such things as sporting equipment, vacations, special foods and other luxuries they could not otherwise afford.

"They have to spend more on clothes, but women generally save a little almost every month for near-future gratification, anything they want tomorrow — a new living room sofa or another major household expense."

(United Press International)

Next on the agenda

Beta Sigma Phi, Xi Eta Rho Chapter, 8 p.m. Thursday at home of Mrs. Cara Zermuehlen, Elk Grove Village. Pat Sturdevant to present "Practical Arts: Learn How Clinic."

Double Dydee Mothers of Twins Club, 8 p.m. Thursday at Clearbrook School, Rolling Meadows. Annual Grandmothers Night. A "Stretch and Sew" demonstration will be featured with the potluck dinner. 766-1168.

Young Single Parents, 9 p.m. Thursday at Arlington Park Hilton. Election of officers, followed by socializing and dancing. 255-0118.

Palatine-Rolling Meadows La Leche League, 8 p.m. Thursday in Palatine home of Mrs. Steven Camp. Discussion on the advantages of breast-feeding. Babies welcome. 359-4030.

Summertime brides-to-be

Johnson-Zieman

The engagement of Susan Gayle Johnson to Richard James Zieman has been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford H. Johnson Jr., Palatine. Richard's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Zieman, are also Palatine residents. A June wedding is planned.

Both young people are graduates of Palatine High School, Susan in 1973 and Richard in 1971. A Harper College graduate, Susan attended the University of Illinois, and now works for Honeywell, Inc., Elk Grove Village. Richard, a graduate of Millon College, is employed by Southland Corp., Roselle.

McLennan-Gates

Dr. and Mrs. Roderick C. McLennan of Arlington Heights announce the engagement of their daughter, Bonnie Ann, to Joseph Michael Gates, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gates of Rockford. The wedding will take place in July.

A Prospect High School graduate, Bonnie is graduating from Tulsa University this month and will work at Evanston Hospital starting in August. Joseph is a graduate of Maine West High School and presently attends the University of Illinois Circle Campus.

O'Leary-Palmer

Two Purdue University students, both currently working on their master's degrees, plan to be married in August. The engagement of Kathleen Marie O'Leary to James Douglas Palmer has been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James R. O'Leary of Mount Prospect. James is the son of the John B. Palmers of Fort Wayne, Ind.

Kathleen, a graduate of Prospect High School, and James also did their undergraduate work at Purdue. Her field of study is speech pathology; his is entomology.

Less income goes for health care

Out-of-pocket expenses for health care take a smaller proportion of Americans' incomes than a decade ago, mainly because of increased contributions to health insurance by their employers.

The latest survey by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics shows the $491 spent for health care in 1973 by families and single consumers accounted for 4.2 per cent of the total average income of $11,802, compared with $340, or 5.4 per cent in 1960-61, the date of the previous survey.

The bureau said out-of-pocket expenses not covered by health insurance rose $38, or 15 per cent, over the same period. (UPI)

Realism needed in TV police shows

Television cops have reigned as the gun-toting, tough-talking American heroes for a long time now, ever since the cowboy rode off into the sunset, only to be seen occasionally in the reruns.

The rough and tough image of the policeman and detective has been etched into the minds of a new generation. The problem is many of the impressions children are walking away with about professionals, such as policemen, and the way they do business, are false.

Volumes have and can be written analyzing the pros and cons of television, but suffice it to say not every portrayal of a public defender or man of law and order on television has been completely accurate.

Not every police lieutenant grabs his suspect by the neck tie, verbally assaults him, intimidates him to pieces, makes him feel like dirt and walks away cool and calm with a sucker in his mouth. Undoubtedly, some real police officials do.

BUT, THE cop who is a cross between a good guy and a bad guy, who suffers more emotional injury from his job than physical injury, who may not run up anything more than minor violations in his day's work and never pulls the trigger once during his entire career deserves equal time on the tube.

That kind of cop deserves equal time because he represents the majority of policemen and helps give the public a more complete picture of what police work is all about.

Few if any television cop shows have succeeded in offereing viewers a balanced look at any profession — be it soldier, doctor, lawyer, newspaper reporter or cop.

The very nature of the beast demands that it be so.

A television series dealing solely with the day-in, day-out routine of any professional would not last long, even if it were sprinkled with the excitement and real conflict that is certainly woven in all of our lives.

Viewers expect more. They expect to be turned on every time they tune on their television sets. And so, the real routine of the policeman or other professional gets hyped up.

Even the series "Adam 12" that attempted to pattern the routine, day-to-day activities of two patrolmen was a bit padded and suffered an early death because it just wasn't exciting enough.

PRODUCERS OF programs such as "Kojack," "Baretta" and "Hawaii Five-O" agree that their series contain more action on a regular basis than any one policeman or detective possibly could face during his entire career. But, they insist, they must. It's all a matter of survival.

"I think we are as realistic as we can afford to be. We have to highlight action each week, otherwise audiences would be bored. When you come right down to it, no one's life is really all that exciting. But, we have to make it exciting," said James McAdams, producer of "Kojak."

"Kojak," as other police shows, has made regular use of professional advisers who help maintain the reality of the police work being portrayed. Burt Armus, a homicide detective from the Bronx, helps model characters and situations in the series after real-life.

But, no one will deny the appeal of "Kojak" is because of the high styling of Telly Savalas. "He gets tough and tries to psych out his opponent. He doesn't hurt him, he just tries to show him who's boss," McAdams said.

No one ever talks back to Lt. Theo Kojak, calls him names or spits in his face. Kojak is never wrong.

JOSEPH WAMBAUGH

THIS OMNISCIENT, indestructible vein that runs through nearly every cop on television came off a blueprint contrived by Sonny Grosso.

Grosso, formerly a cop for 19 years, turned actor in the film "The French Connection," as well as writer of TV police dramas, story editor for scripts and a general adviser and producer of many television police stories.

Grosso's portrayal of a police academy recruit and a member of the team that broke the French Connection changed the way cops were characterized in films and television shows. "The French Connection" was based on one of Grosso's most famous cases and the cops in that film were patterned after the kind of cop Grosso knew and was.

Hence, today we know only too well the independent, hard crusted maverick cop.

However, there has been one obvious exception to the popular portrayal of policemen on television, evidenced during the past four years in the "Police Story" series.

AN EX-OFFICER and creator of the series, Joseph Wambaugh, has struggled to maintain a straight-forward reality about the police profession. He finally is dropping out of show business because the network's unquenched desire for fabricated violence and action defies his belief in portraying cops as human beings with less than super-human and insensitive qualities.

Because Wambaugh tried to offer audiences less than the spectacular cop in a rather truthful light, "Police Story" has filled a void in television programming for those who cared to round out their impressions of police work.

The series will leave a void in programming when it ends next season, except for a few special episodes.

Maybe NBC's five consecutive showings on Tuesdays of the best "Police Story" episodes, which begins today at 9 p.m. on Channel 5, is some kind of a fond farewell. "Little Boy Lost," "A Dangerous Age," "Ten Year Honeymoon," "Line of Fire" and "Eamon Kinsella Royce" are the five rerun episodes to be highlighted featuring stars such as Claude Akins, Ed Asner, Jackie Cooper and Marty Ingels.

But, the stars aren't important. It's the scripts and the delivery that always has been important when it comes to a show like "Police Story" because it always has strived for something rather uncommon to the television experience — reality.

'Hard Times' another fine British television import

by JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — On American public television, the cry "The British are coming, the British are coming" has become reason for rejoicing, and the new four-part production of Charles Dickens' "Hard Times" is no exception.

The first of four hour-long segments will air Wednesday as part of public television's "Great Performances" on WTTW, Channel 11, at 8 p.m.

From the sooty poverty of the industrial revolution to the smugness of those who live in comfort, "Hard Times" combines an attention to detail with fine acting to produce a period piece of considerable fascination.

Purists can have no argument with the serialization; after all, the original novel was first published in weekly episodes in 1854 in Dickens magazine, "Household Words."

hardware (hard ware-Hard Times) major threads of the story, the first involving Mr. Gradgrind, a retired hardware (hard ware-Hard Times) dealer with political ambitions who has founded a school to teach the poor in the manner he believes right — face facts and repress fancy.

Gradgrind, played by Patrick Allen, truly believes in his stern approach to education, and proves it by applying the same imagination-squelching rules to the education of his son and daughter, played by Richard Wren and Jacqueline Tong (she was Daisy in "Upstairs, Downstairs").

If Gradgrind is a prim and grim Victorian, his friend Bounderby (Timonthy West) is a self-made, self-satisfied, middle-aged factory owner who plans to take Gradgrind's son into his business and to marry Gradgrind's unwilling daughter.

When a traveling circus comes to town, Gradgrind's decency comes to the fore and he takes into his home the daughter of an alcoholic clown who has deserted her.

On another level, this also is the story of Stephen Blackpool (Alan Dobie), one of Bounderby's factory "hands," married to a drunken hag, attached to a girl he cannot marry and hamstrung by poverty from taking advantage of the law that otherwise would allow him to divorce.

THE SERIES was co-produced by the British Granada Productions and New York's PBS station, WNET, in meticulous detail.

One of the problems in production was to reproduce the smoky, dirty pall that enshrouded the English Midlands manufacturing towns in Dickens' day. The company had to resort to smudgepots and other dirty tricks to accomplish realistic dirt.

The show is one of contrasts — the grime of the mill town, the tawdry flash of the circus, the richly polished gleam inside the well-to-do home.

Most fascinating are the attitudes of the rich, convinced of the rightness of their own prosperity, and of the poverty of others.

Equal time rule for debates rapped

by ROBERT BENJAMIN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The broadcast networks should be permitted to arrange presidential debates without worrying about equal time provisions, and television voluntarily is toning down violence, network executives said Monday.

Executives of NBC, CBS and ABC testified before the Senate Commerce subcommittee on communications chaired by Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., which is studying broadcasting.

Everett Erlick, senior vice president and general counsel for ABC, said the networks should be exempted from the "equal time" provision of the Federal Communications Act for presidential debates.

LAST FALL'S presidential debates were arranged by the League of Women Voters, when the Federal Communications Commission ruled "debates, arranged by those other than broadcasters and candidates, could qualify as a 'bona fide news event' exempt from the equal time provision," Erlick said.

"However, the coverage was not without its difficulties," he said, referring to a League of Women Voters rule against cameras panning the audience. He said a permanent suspension would "resolve lingering ambiguities" and increase flexibility "in the political broadcasting area."

John Schneider, CBS broadcast group president, said criticism of children's programming "comes from those who have not taken the trouble to watch children's television, to take into account what children will watch, to understand the problems of programming to children who have limited attention spans, to avoid making television a sixth day of school."

ROBERT HOWARD, president of NBC television, said the networks have broadcast "standards" departments which "specialize in judgments on propriety and taste — on conformity to contemporary standards."

The National PTA and other groups have protested television violence. Howard said NBC next fall would have less "hardaction" programming.

Sen. Robert Griffin, R-Mich., asked for a definition of "hard-action" and Howard's reply drew laughter:

"Police action-type programs where there would be a chase involved, physical action — heavy physical action."

All three executives said they were opposed to censorship, but conceded television had a responsibility in the area of violence in programming and is doing something about it.

Air controllers guide green dots to safety of airports

PAT GERLACH

The Boeing 727 jet cruised smoothly through the dusk at 35,000 feet.

The cabin lights had been dimmed and trays were cleared, but many of the 120 passengers lingered over coffee or after dinner drinks to help pass the next 45 minutes until their plane would land at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport.

On the flight deck, the copilot of Trans Continental Flight 483 observed a menacing row of thunderheads in the distance. In a brief discussion with the pilot, it was decided the plane could not easily detour around the turbulence.

"INDIANAPOLIS Center, 483."

"Center. Go ahead."

"We see some thunderheads up front. Request to detour south."

The Indianapolis Center controller scanned his monitor for traffic south of Flight 483 and radioed approval, asking the crew to report when the detour was completed.

The Indianapolis Center is one of a network of 25 air route traffic control centers serving the United States. Each center is responsible for handling enroute aircraft operating under instrument flight rules between airport terminal areas.

A typical center has responsibility for more than 100,000 square miles of airspace within a number of surrounding states.

EACH PLANE within a center's jurisdiction is radar monitored by the controllers, who constantly scan their screens to ensure proper distance between planes, altitude and other factors involved in flight safety.

Fifteen minutes after Flight 483's detour began, the copilot transmitted again.

"Trans Continental 483 turning back to J 149," he said, using the shorthand term for Jet Route 149, the superhighway in the sky assigned to the plane for most of its trip from Washington (D.C.) National Airport.

Because 483 was approaching the boundary of the Indianapolis control center, the controller transferred or "handed off" the flight to the Chicago control center at Aurora.

Although the transfer involved a minimum of voice communication, the Chicago center controller asked Flight 483 to "ident," by using a piece of equipment called a transponder.

The device sends out a coded signal that makes the controller's radar target "blip" by enlarging and brightening to confirm positive identification.

FLIGHT 483 and all airline aircraft operate under instrument flight rules, which means they must have approved flight plans and follow instructions from the air traffic control centers that assume responsibility for keeping the aircraft at proper four to five mile distances.

In preparation for landing at O'Hare, the Chicago center controllers gradually have been bringing Flight 483 down to lower altitudes. And as the plane levels off at 7,000 feet at a point over Woodstock, some 30 miles northwest of the field, the pilot tunes in the O'Hare Automatic Terminal Information Service for weather and landing information.

As the plane enters the terminal control area at Crystal Lake, controllers advise a slight left turn in preparation for an approach to runway 14 L at the northeast end of the field.

As the Chicago center controller "hands off," Flight 483 is in the hands of controllers in O'Hare's underground radar room.

Trans Continental's gradual descent is being monitored by the arrival controller and a parallel approach monitor.

JUST BEFORE 483 passes over Palatine, a flight attendant tells passengers to prepare for landing at O'Hare in approximately five minutes.

Exactly five miles from the end of the runway, Flight 483 is 2,500 above Rolling Meadows. The plane has just passed O'Hare's outer marker beacon and is coasting down the radio beam of the instrument landing system that defines its path to the runway.

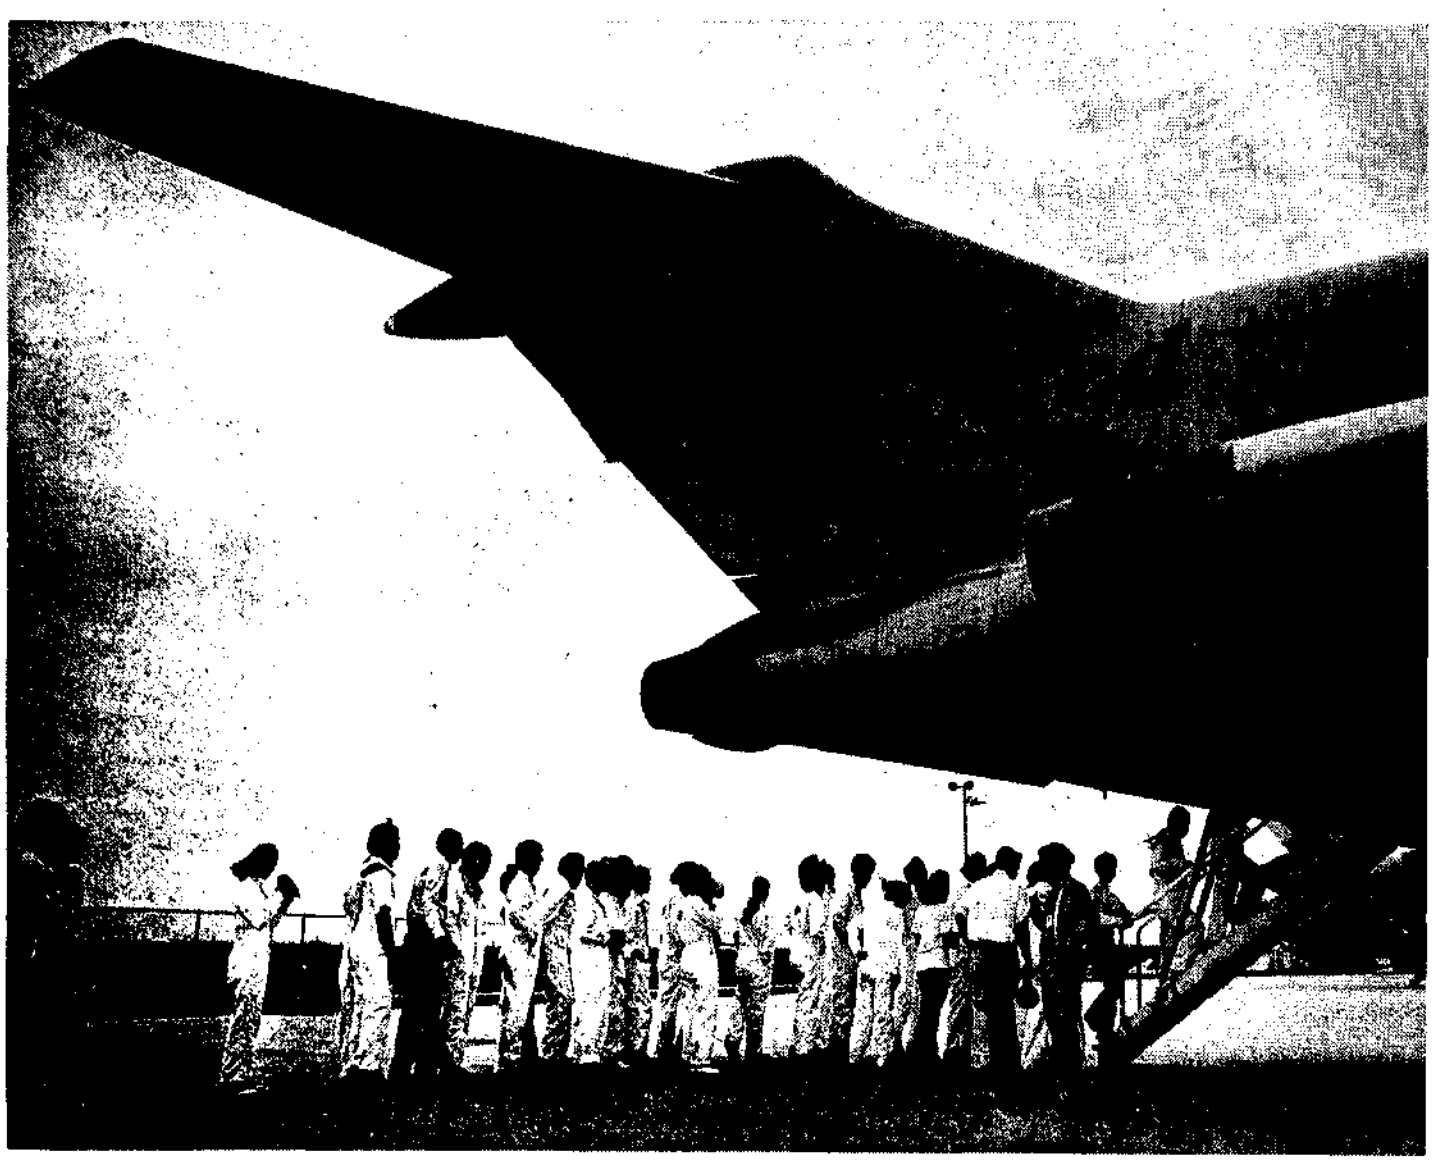

Although 483's data tag on both the Chicago center and O'Hare approach control radar ticks off the plane's altitude in hundred foot increments similar to an automobile's odometer, the copilot provides constant back-up communications designed to ensure safety in the last moments of the trip.

In 483's cabin, some passengers are stirring in their seats, straining for a glimpse of the panorama of twinkling lights below.

Suddenly, the approach lights speed past and the plane softly bumps as it makes contact with the concrete on 14L.

At this point, one of the ground controllers in the huge tower that soars 200 feet above O'Hare takes command, swiftly guiding Flight 483 along the taxiways to the terminal.

It has happened again. More than 100 times during the past hour, a highly skilled team of controllers and others have quickly and safely landed a big bird in the middle of the busiest airport in the world, a field that was little more than an orchard 30 years ago.

Lining up for over-the-wing evacuation exercise

Learning to exit quickly

Flight attendant training rigorous

by NANCY GOTLER

"Grab your ankles and keep your head down," the flight attendant screamed as the disabled plane lurched to a halt and the cabin filled with smoke.

"Unfasten your seatbelts and come this way. Jump!" she said as the choking passengers hurried out the door.

Moments later the attendant and passengers laughed about their mistakes, happy the evacuation had been only a training exercise.

"SOME PEOPLE think flight attendants can't do anything but serve coffee, tea or me," said Frank LaVista, emergency training supervisor for United Airlines. "We feel they are able to handle just about any situation."

The Federal Aviation Administration requires flight attendants to undergo rigorous instruction in first aid, plane evacuation and safety before being assigned to a flight. They must repeat the instruction once each year.

In most states, attendants must be 20 years old, have a high school diploma and be between 5 foot 2 and 6 feet.

EACH AIRLINE may develop a training course, but curriculum must be approved by the FAA.

United Airlines, based at O'Hare, brings trainees to the airport from as far away as Hawaii. The tens of thousands of dollars worth of simulation equipment used during each United applicant's week of disaster instruction is some of the best in the industry, airline officials say.

At United, after spending three weeks learning how to pour coffee on a bumpy ride without spilling it, attendants get bruised, scraped, choked and scared while learning about what could happen aboard a flight.

Only one of 80 applicants is selected for United's flight attendant program. Those picked say they are impressed with the level of disaster training, and attendants returning for the refresher course contend it's needed.

Said Barbara Gibbs of Huntington Beach, Calif.: "I'm not afraid now, and believe me, I was before I came here."

THE ATTENDANTS don coveralls for a three-day exercise in plane evacuation, including escaping over the wing of a real jet and from an inflated chute so they'll be able to convince panicked passengers that the exits are safe.

Attendant Peggy Hackett of Kokomo, Ind., back early this month for her 10th training session, has never had a real on-board emergency but believes she could handle one.

Training helped Susan Dawson of Trenton, N.J., hurry passengers out of a plane during a bomb threat several years ago.

"The instructors are strict, but nice. They're tough, but they have to be because it's lives they're talking about," she said.

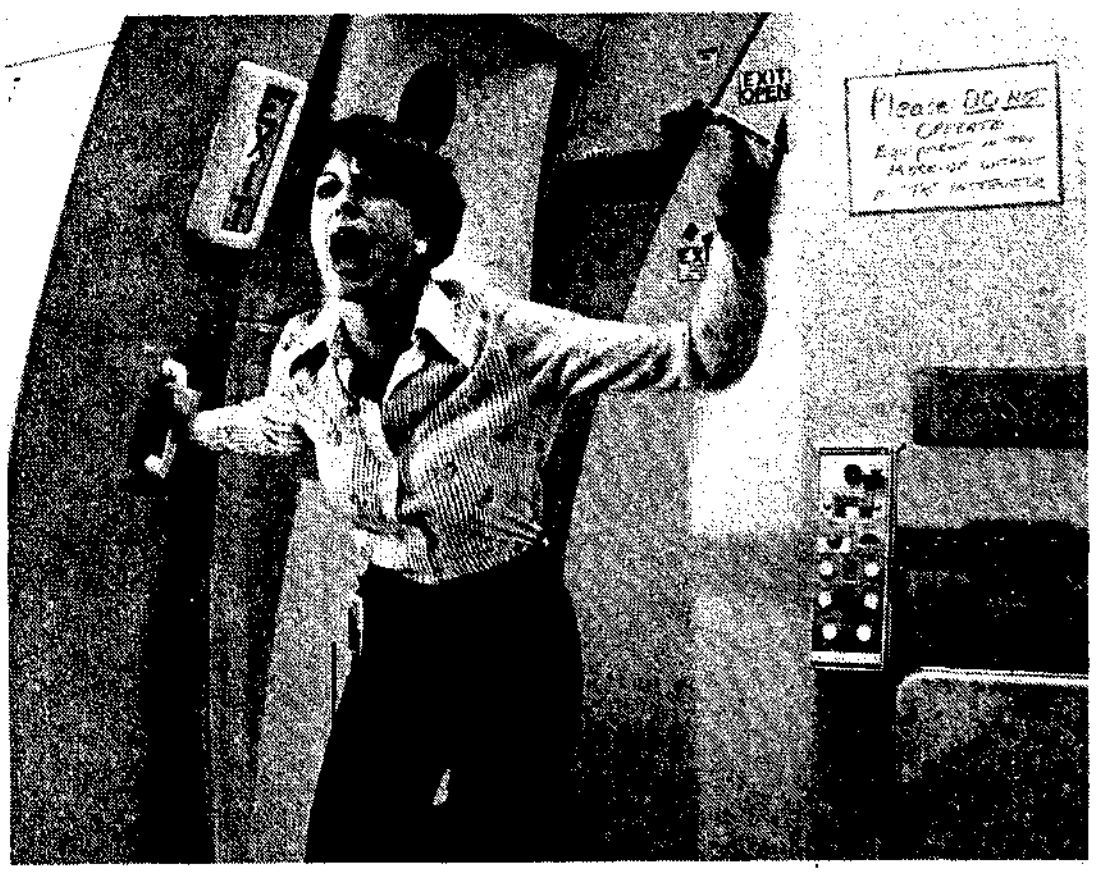

Instructor Mel Hansen doesn't spare words when discussing mistakes made during a simulated evacuation of a burning plane.

"This is one hell of a job and we want you to take it seriously," he said. "We need clear, continuous and exaggerated commands to get these people off the plane.

"We can try it again here," Hansen said, "but the real test for some of you could come out on the line and out there you don't get another chance. You can't afford to make a mistake. You're playing for all the marbles."

Sox stop Texas; half-game out

From Herald Wire Services

ARLINGTON, Tex. — The White Sox climbed to within a half game of first place and the idle Minnesota Twins with a 6-3 win over the Rangers here Monday night as Ken Brett pitched his first complete game of the year for the Sox.

The win made it four in a row for the Sox who are now 6-2 in the first eight games of the 10-game road trip. Jim Essian slammed a two-run tie-breaking double in the sixth and Jorge Orta drove in three other runs to pace the Sox, who've won six of their last seven games.

BRETT SCATTERED nine hits in his distance performance to notch his fourth win against two defeats.

With the score tied 3-3 in the sixth, pinch-hitter Lamar Johnson doubled and Chet Lemon walked. Essian then hit a line drive to the base of the wall in left field which scored both runners. Orta hit a two-run homer in the third inning for the first two White Sox runs and singled home Ralph Garr in the ninth for Chicago's final tally.

In the fourth, the Sox loaded the bases and scored their third run when Essian bounced into a double play.

Mike Hargrove put the Rangers ahead 1-0 in the first inning with a sacrifice fly. Jim Sundberg singled home a run in the fifth before scoring the tying run on Bert Campaneris' single.

ORTA'S HOME RUN was the 34th for the Sox who lead the league so far this year in home run production. Orta's homer, off starter Tommy Boggs, cleared the 400-foot marker in center field. It was his third round tripper of the season.

The Sox chased Boggs in the fourth when Paul Lindblad came on. Lindblad was charged with the loss.

The series continues here tonight when Francisco Barries, (3-1) will pitch for the Sox against Nelson Briles (2-0) for the Rangers.

AL baseball

Elsewhere in the American League, Doug Ault hit a three-run homer in the fourth inning and Al Woods drove in two runs with a pair of singles to lead the Toronto Blue Jays to a 10-4 rout of the Seattle Mariners in the first meeting between the two American League expansion clubs. Ault's blast, his sixth of the season, followed singles by Bob Ballor and Ron Fairly and tied the score at 3-3. The Blue Jays took a 5-3 lead in the fifth and added four runs in the seventh after sending eight batters to the plate.

Terry Humphrey hit his first homer of the season and rookie outfielder Gil Flores scored two other runs Monday night to lift the California Angels to a 5-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Wayne Simpson picked up the win for the Angels, his second of the year in four decisions. Jim Colborn (4-3) took the loss for the Royals.

Joe Rudi batted in his 29th run of the year in the game for California.

TIMELY TAG. Buffalo Grove's Dave Wilhelm puts the tag on Doug Herth of Arlington during a first inning theft attempt at the Hersey-hosted district baseball tournament Monday. The Cardinals scored seven runs in the fourth inning and went on to win, 11-0.

Cubs bomb Houston for fifth in row

HOUSTON — Some slick relief pitching by Willie Hernandez earned the rookie his first Major League save and preserved a 6-1 Chicago Cub triumph over the Astros Monday night.

It was the fifth straight win for the surging Cubs and allowed starting hurler Rick Reuschel to up his slate to 5-1. Chicago took advantage of a Willie Crawford error to climb into a 2-0 first inning lead and wrapped up their scoring with a four-run burst in the second.

HERNANDEZ PITCHED the last three innings of the game and allowed just one hit while striking out five. He also walked just one batter.

Reuschel absorbed slightly more punishment but was never really threatened after the Cubs chased Houston starter Joachim Andujar in the second. He also helped his own cause by touring the bases in the second after getting struck by a pitch.

The Cubs opened scoring when Ivan DeJesus and Greg Gross singled. DeJesus was doubled up but Bobby Murcer walked and Ken Morales drove a fly to left that Crawford let get past him for a two-base miscue.

In the bottom of the first the Astros rapped out four hits including a double by Joe Ferguson but could produce only one run. Reuschel also intentionally passed Bob Watson before a fly out ended the threat.

MANNY TRILLO singled to open the second. A passed ball, a walk to George Mitterwald and the hitsbatsman followed, allowing DeJesus to force in a run with his walk.

Gross sacrifice flied Mitterwald home and Larry Biittner singled in Reuschel. DeJesus tallied on a wild heave shortly after Dan Larson had spelled Andujar on the mound.

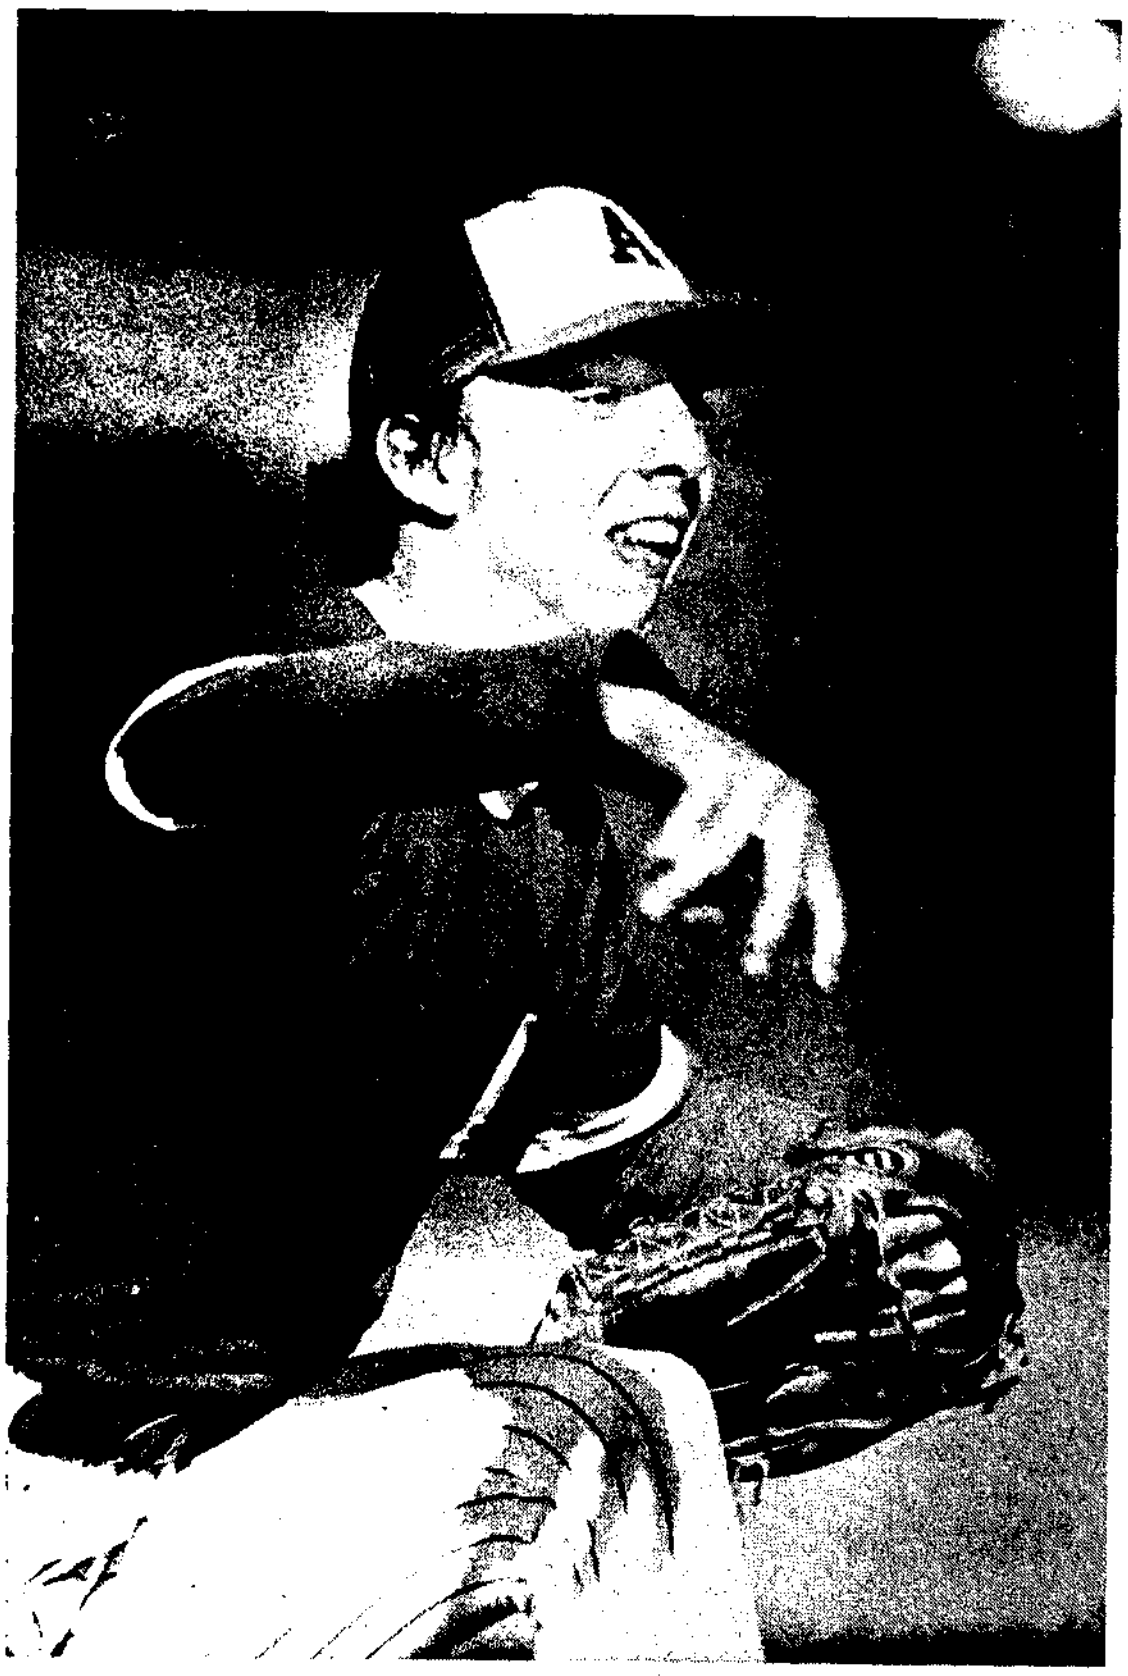

Houston threatened in the third when Ceasar Cedano stole his second and third bases of the game, tying a club record. DeJesus made a stellar catch of Ferguson's blooper in short center though, whirled and gunned down Cedano trying to tag up and reach the plate.

NL baseball

AT ST. LOUIS, Ted Simmons hit a solo home run with none out in the 10th inning to give the Cardinals a nationally-televised 6-5 victory and hand the Cincinnati Reds their sixth straight loss.

Simmons homered off reliever Dale Murray, who lost his first decision of the season.

The victory went to reliever Al Hrabosky, 1-0, who pitched the last two innings. Hrabosky struck out George Foster, Johnny Bench and Bob Bailey with the bases loaded in the ninth and right fielder Mike Anderson saved the game in the 10th when his relay throw to Don Kessinger cut down Ray Knight at the plate when Knight attempted to score on Ken Griffey's double.

Claim district baseball titles

Knights, Cards, Vikes win

Prospect, Arlington and Fremd annexed district baseball titles Monday while Maine West and Elk Grove also advanced. At Wheeling meanwhile Lake Forest thumped Highland Park 9-1 to capture that tourney crown.

Brian DeValk and Mike Frushour teamed up to provide Prospect with a seventh-inning run that allowed the Knights to slip past Glenbrook North 3-2 and claim the Maine North district crown.

Jim McDonald went the distance on the mound for Prospect to notch the win. His team went ahead 2-1 in the bottom of the first when Dave Wille singled and stole second and then came around on a base rap by Mike Jennings.

DeValk and Doug Clark walked after that to load the bases and Gary McCammon also walked to force in the second run.

The Spartans tied the game in the third. In the seventh however DeValk tripled with one away and Frushour singled home the game winner.

BRIAN FLETCHER of the Fremd Vikings came on in relief and struck out seven Hoffman Estates Hawks over the last four innings to lead his club to a 9-3 win over Hoffman and give the Vikings the district championship in a game played at Conant.

Fletcher came on in the fourth inning when Hoffman had loaded the bases against starter Andy Gabrielson and were threatening to get back in the game after Fremd and jumped out to an early 9-1 lead. Fletcher struck out two before giving up an RBI single to Dave Kilcrece which turned out to be the last hit the Hawks would get.

Both teams did all of their scoring early in the face of a stiff cool breeze. Fremd's bats were not cold however, as they rocked starter Bob Slawek for one run in the first, and four runs in the second and third innings.

Dale Kukla of the Vikes rapped a single in the second driving in two runs, and the big blow in the third was a bases loaded triple by catcher Kevin Weaver.

JOHN MERTINS handcuffed Buffalo Grove on one hit while teammates provided more than ample stick support as Arlington roared to an 11-0 triumph for the district crown at Hersey Monday.

The ten-run rule was evoked in the sixth inning after the Cardinals had raked three Bison hurlers for nine hits. There was one out when Dan Frase stroked a two-run double down the left field line to put the Redbirds over the limit.

Mertins had faced just one over the minimum number of batters while nursing a no-hitter into the top of the sixth. He had walked a batter and another Bison reached on a miscue but one was erased in a double play.

Pinch-hitting Bill Forster ruined Mertins' bid for perfection by poking a clean single to left and advancing on a miscue.

Arlington got to Grove starter Mike Marshall with a seven-run barrage in the fourth after two were out. A three-base error triggered the rally and four straight singles followed.

Then Frank DeSimone walked with the bases loaded to force in another run and Gary Kempton greeted relief hurler Mark Rusche with a two-run single.

DeSimone also rapped out a two-run double in the sixth.

ROB EARHART fashioned a no-hitter in leading Maine West past Rolling Meadows 4-0 in one Warrior district semifinal contest. He walked six and fanned five while outdueling Mustang ace Dennis Drolet.

Maine hit Drolet for all their runs in the third inning, Bob Zuccarini and Bob Anderson each singling in one and Frosty Wantroba driving home another pair.

The Warriors now tackle Elk Grove at 4 p.m. today after the Grenadiers disposed of Fenton 11-9 in eight innings.

THE GRENADIERS trailed 8-2 after three frames but rallied for a trio of scores each in the fourth and fifth innings. Then Rick Peter came on and pitched shutout ball over the final three stanzas to gain the winning verdict.

Knotted at 9-all going into the eighth, Kevin McCloughan reached on a fielder's choice for the Grens, went to second on an errant pitchout and to third on a ground out.

Tom Curran was intentionally passed and Pat Rogers subsequently singled in the winning run. Phil Willis singled in an insurance tally.

IN ONE MID-Suburban League contest Palatine shutout Hersey 3-0.

Winning hurler Mike Charlier fanned nine and did not issue a walk. Losing Huskie pitcher Bob Reiland struck out 11 and walked just one.

Glen Daniels singled in one of the Pirate runs and Doug Buenzow had a pair of RBI base raps.

Oh, rats! It's Olympic time

WINOOSKI PARK, Vt. — The culmination of nearly a month of hard training ended last night for 12 laboratory rodents as the first annual "Rat Olympics" got under way at St. Michael's College.

All eyes were on Sec-Rat-Ariat and Shadow Fax, who, along with the other rats, ran an eight-foot distance balancing a lacross ball on their noses.

Other events sponsored by the college's Psychology Department included a four-foot dash, two-inch hurdles and rope and ladder climbs. The rats also tested their skills in the obstacle course, which included a straight run, a tunnel and a zig-zag spring between beer can walls.

Training camp started April 18 when students began using reinforcement principles like reward feeding to obtain desired behavior from the rats.

According to SMC psychology professor Dr. Barry Krikstone, who founded the Rat Olympics, "rats can be taught almost anything with enough time, care and patience."

AL UNSER, who scored back-to-back wins in 1970 and 1971 in the Indianapolis 500, wheels his turbocharged Cosworth Ford around the fourth turn during practice Monday. He was clocked at 196.378 MPH, just a tick of the watch behind Johnny Rutherford, establishing Unser as a contender for the 1977 race.

Indy drivers near 200-mph barrier

INDIANAPOLIS -- The Speedway greyhounds continued chasing the 200 mph rabbit Monday during a near-perfect day for high speeds.

Defending Indy 500 champion Johnny Rutherford finished the day as the quickest of a half dozen runners at 196.850 mph in a late afternoon tour of the 2½-mile oval.

"It wasn't hard to do. The car was working very well," said Rutherford, who shaded Al Unser in the search for speed.

Rutherford also was running in his "backup" car and was making his first appearance of the practice periods.

Unser, one of the other four drivers over 190 during the day which saw temperatures linger in the 60s, posted a lap at 196.378 over the resurfaced track.

Gordon Johncock, who is the only driver to make a lap unofficially faster than 200 mph, was third Monday at 195.822. He posted the 200 mph circuit at the track during March tire testing.

Only speeds during time trials or the race are considered official.

Other 190-plus runners were Bobby Unser, Al's brother, Pancho Carter and Wally Dallenbach.

Three-time winner A. J. Foyt took his car on the track for the first time Monday and ran 189.594 after a few warmups.

The only former winner among the six entered this year not yet making an appearance on the track is Mario Andretti. Andretti has not returned from Europe where he won the Spanish Grand Prix on Sunday.

Janet Guthrie ran laps in the mid-180 range Monday. Guthrie, the first woman seeking to qualify for the 500, still is listed among the top 10 fastest drivers for the three days of practice. She ran a circuit at 188.4 Sunday.

Van Lier on NBA All-Defensive team

Bulls' guard Norm Van Lier was the only returning player on the National Basketball Association's All-Defensive squad, which was announced Monday.

Bobby Jones of the Denver Nuggets headed a list of four others making the five-man squad for the first time.

Jones accumulated 36 points — more than any other player — in the balloting held by NBA coaches before the end of the regular season.

Joining Jones at forward is E. C. Coleman of the New Orleans Jazz. Indiana's Don Buse, who led the league in steals, makes up the backcourt with Van Lier. Van Lier has now earned first or second team designation in each of the last seven years.

The closest race was at center, where Portland's Bill Walton edged Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of Los Angeles for the first team.

In addition to Jabbar, the second team consists of forwards Jim Brewer of Cleveland and Jamaal Wilkes of Golden State, and guards Don Chaney of Los Angeles and Brian Taylor of Kansas City.

Sting trade for Aztecs' Ralbovsky

The Sting announced Monday it traded Miro Rys, 20, a reserve forward, to the Los Angeles Aztecs for Steve Ralbovsky, a forward who was the Aztecs first round draft choice in 1976.

Ralbovsky, 24, was the most sought after college player in the North American Soccer League's short history.

Toronto deals 2 for Rangers' Howell

TORONTO — The Toronto Blue Jays Monday announced the acquistion of third baseman Roy Howell from the Texas Rangers for shortstop Jim Mason, pitcher Steven Hargan and cash.

Howell, 23, batted .251 and .253 for the Rangers for the last two seasons. In seven games for Texas this season, he aas 0-for-17.

Mason, acquired from the New York Yankees along with Otto Velez in the expansion draft, has appeared in 22 games for the Jays, hitting .165. He batted .180 in 1976.

Hargan, 34, has a 1-3 record and 5.22 earned run average. He was 8-8 and 3.63 for the Rangers last season before going to Toronto in the expansion draft.

Mason, 26, also played previously with Texas, in 1972 and 1973, before being sold to the Yankees.

2 draw NCAA wrath for recruiting

MISSION, Kan. — Texas A&M and North Carolina Central universities were both put on probation by the NCAA Monday for recruiting violations.

Texas A&M drew a one-year penalty for violations involving its basketball team. The team will remain elgible for post season play.

North Carolina Central was put on two-year probation for violations in its track program, including improper recruiting and extra benefits paid to two team members.

Sports people

The Spinks brothers, Leon and Michael, who both won goldmedals at last year's Olympics, will make their professional boxing debut in Canada on June 1, it was announced Monday . . . Leon, a 23-year-old lightheavyweight, will take on Canadian heavyweight George Jerome in an eight-round bout . . . 20-year-old Michael, a middleweight, will fight a yet unnamed opponent . . .

Kentucky basketball center Mike Phillips was hospitalized Monday with a cracked rib and other injuries he sustained in a traffic accident.

Mount Prospect

The Mount Prospect Skating Club held its 17th annual awards banquet at the Mystic Harbour Restaurant with 55 in attendance. New officers were named as follows: Don Schulze, president; Chuck Anderson, vice president; Bob Vehe, secretary; Jack Scambler, treasurer; Edythe Anderson, club manager; Chuck Serchuk and Roger Arseneau, coaches. Eric Eschenfelder was awarded Class A skater-of-the-year honors and Jeff Arseneau took Class B honors.

Depending on Buckner's foot

Biittner rents first base

Byline report

Jeff Nordlund

You'll have to forgive the Cubs' Larry Biittner if he can't talk at length about his season's goals. Consider these reasons:

• Biittner is hitting .313 with 21 hits, playing first base like a Golden Glove candidate. He's done so despite jumping into the starting line-up sometimes with as little as a couple minutes' notice.

• Biittner admits he's off to the best start of his seven-year major league career.

• Manager Herman Franks has had nothing but compliments for the 29-year-old left-handed hitter. "He's doing a heckuva job," Franks remarked Sunday after Biittner went 2-for-5.

• But despite all this, Biittner's job as starting first baseman depends less on what he does on the field than how Bill Buckner's tender foot feels from day to day.

When Buckner says he's ready to play again, Biittner knows he'll go back to the bench — .313 batting average and all.

"I KNEW THE situation when the Cubs acquired 'Buck' this spring," Biittner said calmly Sunday. "I knew exactly how many outfielders and first basemen the Cubs had. Whatever happens, happens."

That's why Biittner can't talk much about his goals. The next time Buckner returns to the line-up, it may be for the remainder of the season. Or Buckner may be hobbled, as he is now, the rest of the schedule.

There will be no middle ground. Biittner and Buckner both bat left-handed, and so the possibility the two will be platooned doesn't exist.

"I can't see it," Biittner said, considering the likelihood he and Buckner could trade off at first base. "Buck has to play every day.

"ALL I CAN DO is do the best I'm able while I'm playing. There once was a time I wold sit and worry about this situation. But not now. That's helped me bear this."

Buckner came to Chicago last May in a trade bringing him and pitcher Steve Renko from Montreal for Andy Thornton. He played half of the season for the Cubs as a starter, and he figured he had little chance to do the same this year after Buckner came to Chicago for Rick Monday.

But Buckner could hardly walk when the Cubs made the trade in January, and even now he favors his foot, which he re-injured last week against Houston. Biittner played most of the spring at first base, and now has logged the most time at the position during the season.

"THIS IS BY FAR the best start I've ever had," Biittner said. "This is the first year I've got to play as much so early. Before, I was set down and I would only fill in.

"I don't treat the situation as if it were like a hammer over my head ready to fall. That's just the way things are . . ."

Not only has Biittner been a surprise at the plate, he hit .245 for the Cubs in 1976, but he's been strong in the field.

"I've always thought of myself as a good glove man," Biittner said. "But things are going good for me right now. I admit it. I'm making the big plays."

FRANKS HAS indicated he will play Buckner as soon as he says his foot is sound again — no sooner. Buckner has a lifetime batting average of .289, compared to Biittner's .268.

So, Biittner can't say much about his season's goals. Instead, he'll just have to come to the ball park every day and see if his name is in the line-up. That's all he can do for now.

WEIGH OUT. Challenger Aldredo Evangelista of Spain plays doctor as he takes a stethoscope to heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali. The two meet for the title Monday.

Wheeling favored in girls track

There'll be a new twist in determining this year's Mid-Suburban League girls track champion, and it should make today's conference meet at Palatine the climax of the conference schedule.

Unlike last season, dual meets won't count towards the team title this time around. That should eliminate what happened last season when Rolling Meadows won the crown in an anticlimactic dual meet rescheduled after the conference meet.

Even though the dual meets held no importance in the race for the title, they did establish Wheeling as the strongest team in the 13-team field and today's favorite when the meet begins at 4:30 p.m.

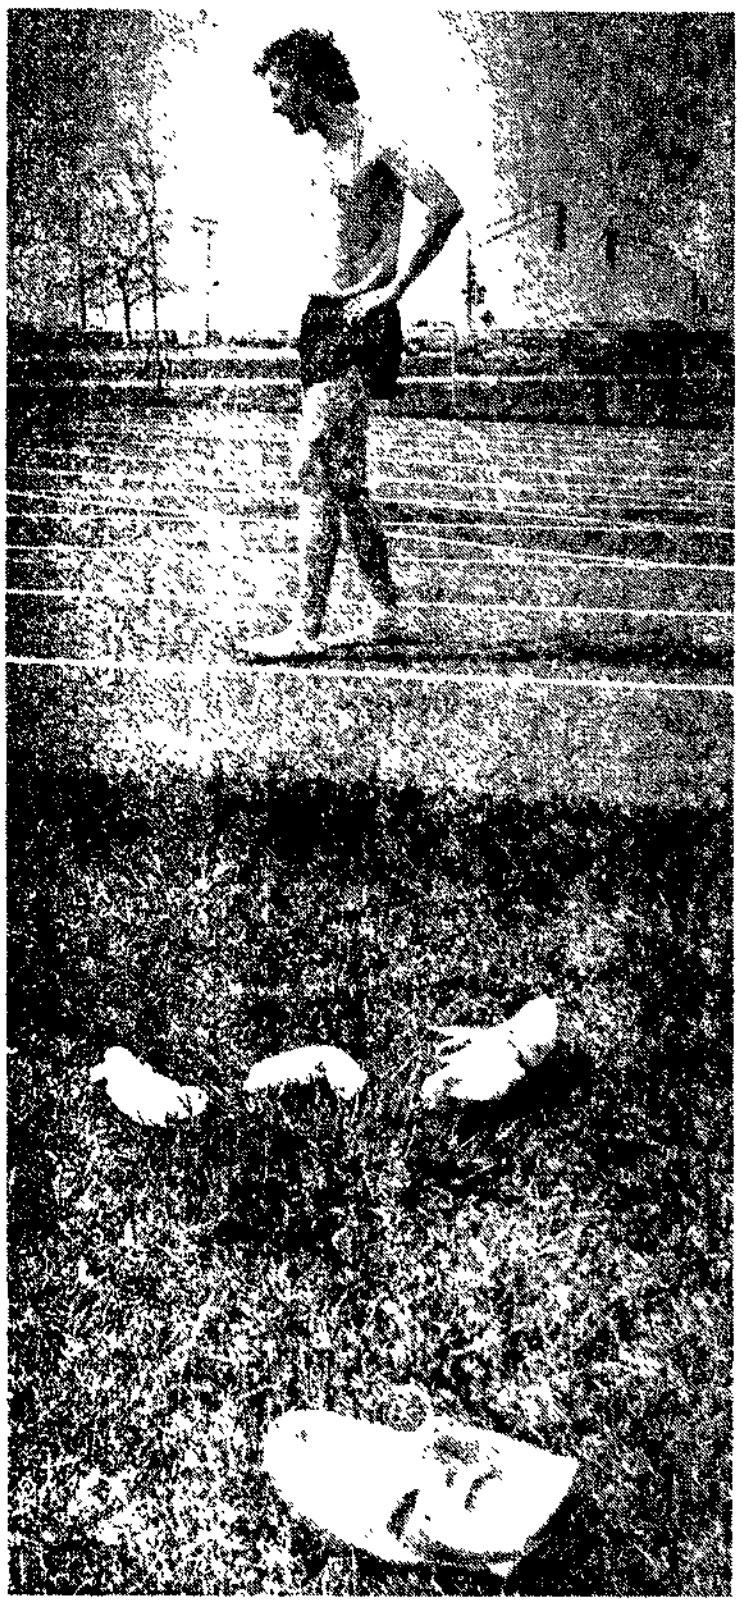

THE WILDCATS have won six conference dual meets, as well as winning the girls titles at the Palatine Relays and Falcon Invitational the past two weekends. Last season, Wheeling finished second to Hersey at the conference meet and second to the Mustangs in the final standings.

Wheeling's stiffest challenge may come from those same pair of schools. Hersey and Rolling Meadows. Hersey lost to Wheeling 61.5-56 in their dual meet earlier in the spring for the Huskies' only dual meet loss in conference.

Rolling Meadows has a winning dual meet record, but lost to Hersey 69-61 already this season. Other squads with strong dual meet records thus far are Buffalo Grove, Palatine and Arlington.

Wheeling coach Donna Dubbelde has Gail Miloch to count on today. Miloch has already bettered the state qualifying times in the 880-yard, mile and two-mile runs this spring, while leading the conference in those events. She broke her own meet records in the 880 and mile runs at the Falcon Invitational Friday.

BONNIE BUENZOW is another strong performer for Wheeling, owning top times in the 440-yard dash and the long jump. Sandy Rainey (high jump), Cheryl Wood (shot put), Kathy Wachter (long jump) and the 880 and mile relay teams also placed among the top three in the most recent MSL track honor roll.

AGONY OF DA FEET. Long-distance runners, like this one at Harper recently, have for centuries sought relief for their tired, aching feet. Mid-Suburban girls will test their endurance today in conference meet at Palatine.

Henson's right-hand man is key to Illinois program

Loren Tate

CHAMPAIGN, ILL. — Sometimes the best trades are the ones that don't happen.

That's an old Bill Veeck bromide.

Lou Henson agrees. The Illini basketball coach has been involved in four recent transactions adding depth in the form of new recruits to his all-underclassman squad. But the most important development may have been the status quo situation of his staff.

Tony Yates, the 39-year-old Cincinnatian who has changed the entire nature of the UI basketball program (for the better), signed on for his fourth year on April 30. . . just a few days after the bright lights of Los Angeles beckoned for the second time in three years.

YATES FIRST declined an opportunity to accompany Gene Bartow to UCLA following the 1975 season. Then last month Bob Boyd, battling to revive a Southern Cal quintet which has won just two Pacific-8 games in two years, offered Yates the position as No. 1 assistant.

"I talked to John Jackson," said Boyd, referring to the former Illini backfield coach now with the Rose Bowl champions. "Tony came very highly recommended although John explained that he might not want to leave Illinois. We liked Tony very much and I'm sure he liked us. But he has brought in some fine athletes at Illinois and didn't want to leave."

This comes as awfully good news for Illinoisans, who have watched Yates work and have openly sweated out his inevitable ascension to a more attractive position. He has turned down at least four prime assistant coaching positions during his tour with the Illini.

Other than to acknowledge his long-range goals of becoming a head coach and winning the NCAA championship (which he did twice as a player at Cincinnati), Yates is not easily pinned down on his innermost thoughts.

"I feel we are making gains," he said, "and I'm pleased with our recruiting this year. Over-all, this is probably the best group we have brought in."

YATES WAS directly responsible for 6-7 Eddie Johnson of Chicago Westinghouse, 6-5 Mike Jones of Joliet Central and Lake Land Junior College guard Reno Gray. The Illini also recruited Mark Smith as head coach Lou Henson continued the concentration on Richwoods High that began with efforts to entice Derek Holcomb a year earlier.

The addition of the four young black stars gives the Illini eight blacks on a squad that hadnone when Yates joined the staff little more than three years ago. His immediate recruitment of Audie Matthews and Rich Adams gave the program a lift following a 5-18 season and it has been moving steadily upward ever since.

"When I came here the high school coaches didn't feel the University of Illinois was a healthy situation for their players," said Yates. "They wouldn't encourage their players to come here. It was a pretty desperate situation. The existng talent level was very low — rock bottom — and our immediate acceptance wasn't that good."

THE MAJOR breakthrough developed through Yates' close friendship with coach Wes Mason at Bloom. Mason helped the Illini recruit Matthews at a time when Audie was considered the state's premier player. Audie has been a key player in Henson's 28-29 record over the past two seasons.

"Audie was important to the revitalization of the program," said Yates. "He has had no problems and people have treated him great. He could reflect all that to other players we were trying to recruit."

It is generally accepted that the Illini have recuited three of the state's top four prep seniors in 1977. No other major university in the state has been successful with the blue-chip Illinois preps this year. In fact, of nine senior News-Gazette All-Staters, three chose the UI, Hinsdale South's Andy Burton picked DuPage Junior College and the other five went out of state.

Southern Illinois University, for all the prestige gained in qualifying for the NCAA playoffs, lost Eldorado's Mike Duff to Missouri and had announced just one recruit, Jim Orr of Marion, prior to the weekend. NIT qualifier Illinois State listed only Springfield's McKay Smith. Northwestern is again lagging, actually surprising Peorians by taking little-known John Egan of Bergan among its three signees. Neither Bradley nor DePaul has had much to shout about.

Prospect prevails in softball

The Prospect girls softball team erased any doubts about their abilities as they defeated Forest View 6-4 in sub-regional play Monday.

Forest View has 12 wins and but two losses this season, both at the hands of Prospect, who just about eliminated the Falcons from the Mid-Suburban League South title race with a 2-1 win earlier and dropped the Falcons from the state tournament with its win Monday.

In other sub-regional action Monday, Addision Trail trounced Elk Grove, 9-5. Buffalo Grove stopped Wheeling 7-5. Palatine edged Arlington 13-12 and Fremd clubbed Sacred Heart, 15-5.

IN THE TWO team Hoffman Estates sub-regional, Conant won the right to play in the Fremd Regional next week with a 14-13 win over the host Hoffman club.

A bunch of miscues by Forest View helped the Knights, who meet host Maine West Wednesday for that title, get the win. "I thought four runs would have been plenty," lamented Falcons' coach Al Beard. "We did things wrong today that we haven't done all year."

Elk Grove left 18 baserunners stranded and that sums up the Grenadiers problems in the Fenton sub-regional.

Wheeling's eight errors aided Buffalo Grove, which now meets host Stevenson Wednesday for that sub-regional crown. Wheeling had the tying runs on in the final inning, but the Bison got an inning ending double play and then threw a strike to home, cutting down the runner trying to score from third.

Cheryl Eyarman hit her second, first-inning grand slam home run of the year and pitched for the win as Conant prevailed over Hoffman.

Debbie Dilks paced winning Fremd with a 3-for-4 showing at bat and four RBIs while teammate Pam Lechner was 2-for-3 with three RBIs. The Vikings take on Rolling Meadows for that sub-regional crown Wednesday.

In another two-team regional, Lake Park is at Schaumburg today with the winner going on to the regionals next week. Arlington tackles Hersey Wednesday for the title of that sub-regional.

Golden Shoe nice for Fremd, but . . .

by ART MUGALIAN

Fremd won the Dist. 211 track meet for the fifth year in a row Monday night at Hoffman, but the Vikings' big test will come this weekend and coach Pat Brogan knows it. The Golden Shoe is nice, but it's just for fun.

"This meet is good for finding out where you're going to run certain kids in the conference meet," said Brogan after his Vikes prepared for the Mid-Suburban finals Thursday and Friday with an easy victory.

"Like Polomsky." Brogan added. "We want to see if we should run him in the 330 lows."

RANDY POLOMSKY showed his coach that he can indeed run the low hurdles, clocking a 39.4 for a victory Monday in only the third time he had run the event. He's been under :40 every time.

Polomsky also won the 100-yard dash in 10.1 and anchored Fremd's winning 440 relay (44.0) outsprinting Schaumburg's Mike Christy to the tape. Both those times were meet records.

Fremd scored a whopping 90½ points, then almost forgot their trophy, the Shoe, in the press box. Included in the Viking's eight firsts were a meet-record 14.67 for high hurdler Gary Gunderson, and wins for triple jumper Dave Smedly (43-4), long jumper Paul Passaglia (19-6½), pole vaulter Greg Stipe (13-6), and discus thrower Tom Merritt (147-2).

Palatine, with five first places, scored 57 points, Schaumburg had 46, Hoffman 37½, and Conant 34.

FREMD UNDOUBTEDLY would have done better but for the absence of senior quadruple-threat Brian Schones, who is academically ineligible and may not be able to compete in the conference meet, either.

Polomsky, therefore, becomes Fremd's most versatile (and valuable) performer because he can run so many events.

"We might run him in the 100, the lows, the 220 and the 440 relay," said Brogan. "OR . . . the 100, the 440, the mile relay and the 440 relay. OR . . ."

Polomsky might have won the 220 Monday except that he missed his heat of the semis, and Palatine's Dave Kennedy won with a meet-record 22.56.

KENNEDY, A sophomore, also ran the 880 and finished a hair behind teammate Tom Johnson, the winner. Both Pirates clocked 2:00.8 as they coasted into the tape. They may as well have held hands.

Johnson, who will probably stick to the mile and the two-mile in the MSL championships, came back for a 4:35.2 workout in winning the mile. He let teammate Kevin Koy open up a large lead through the first three-quarters before letting out the clutch.

Palatine also got a personal best from two-miler Kevin Nikolai, whose 9:36.8 was good enough to nip Fremd's Bob Ratcliffe (9:39.7). The Pirate two-mile relay team ran 8:26 for a win.

Schaumburg's only wins came from Jeff Ways, who ran 52.2 in the open quarter, then clocked a 49.4 anchor split in the mile relay, coming from last place to win easily (3:34.7).

Helen Sobel never did learn

A perfect safety play is one that is going to work against any and all card combinations. Here is one that is not well known in spite of the fact that it has appeared in this column before.

A story goes with it. Some 40 plus years ago a young girl played for the first time at New York's Cavendish Club. She became declarer at three notrump and won the first trick.

Then she played her ace of diamonds. The king fell from the West hand and it was a simple matter for the girl to score two diamond tricks and make her contract. That girl later became known as Helen Sobel Smith, the greatest woman player of all time.

A male chauvinist player said, "You were lucky. The correct play would have been to lead a diamond from dummy and put in your ten."

Of course, he was wrong. Her play was sure to produce two diamond tricks for her against any and all diamond combinations.

A couple of months went by. Helen was faced with the same card combination. Again she played her ace. Again she made the two tricks she was sure to make and the male chauvinist said, "You'll never learn."

Ask Andy

Cheese made by solidifying proteins in milk

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Carl Shivers, 8, of Huntsville, Ala., for his question:

HOW IS CHEESE MADE?

Cheese contains a very large amount of protein and fat. It is made by solidifying the proteins and removing the water found in milk. It isn't, of course, that easy.

The type of cheese you make depends on the kind of milk used and the treatment it is subjected to in the process of making and curing the product.

Cheddar cheese made in the United States and England starts with whole milk that is curdled with rennet extract, the soluble ferment found in the fourth stomach of calves. The curd, which is the name for the solid part of the solidified milk, is separated from the watery whey.

The cheese then stands for a few minutes to build up a certain degree of acidity. The curd then is cut into small pieces followed by a heating and stirring action. Much skill from the cheesemaker is necessary to handle this and other steps of the processing.

When the consistency of the curd becomes right, the remaining whey is drawn off and the curd collected at the bottom of a vat. Then follows more cutting and milling to break up the mass. The cheese then is wrapped in cloths and pressed to remove any remaining whey.

Next comes placement on shelves in a curing room where the cheese is allowed to "ripen" for several weeks or months. A temperature of between 40 and 45 degrees is used for what is known as cold curing although some processors use temperatures below freezing.

More cheddar cheese, or American as it is often called, is bought in America than any other kind. It's the favorite type.

Swiss, a hard cheese known for its holes, is made from whole and skim milk.

Cream cheese and cottage cheese are not ripened before they are sold. Cream cheese is made from cream and has a high percentage of fat. Cottage cheese is made from the curd of skim milk, with a bit of cream being added to the variety called creamed cottage cheese.

Cheese is a nutritious food and is an excellent source of calcium and vitamin A. With its high protein and fat content, it makes an excellent and inexpensive substitute for meat in the diet. Combined with macaroni, it has become one of the classic budget-savers.

Cheese also is one of the most popular items used when packing school lunches.

Andy sends a Denoyer-Geppert World Globe to Mike Barber, 12, of Eugene, Ore., for his question:

WHY DO WE CALL IT AN ADAM'S APPLE?

Two wings of cartilage meet at right angles in front of the larynx or voice box, making a lump on the neck of some men that we call an Adam's apple. The lump usually is seen when a boy starts his adolescent years, as the larynx grows larger and the voice deepens. It isn't a rule, however, since this lump is not seen in every person.

The lump was given the name of Adam's apple through a confusion over two similar Hebrew words. The picturesque name, the story goes, is a reminder of the Biblical first man and the forbidden fruit he tasted.

A woman can also have an Adam's apple although it isn't a common female trait.

Do you have a question to Ask Andy? Send it on a post card with your name, age and complete address to Ask Andy in care of The Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Entries are open to girls and boys 7 to 17.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

ARE YOU A DOUBLE AGENT?
An ambitious go getter with the ability to be both a great salesperson and a terrific administrator? We're one of the largest publicly owned mortgage bankers in the country with an opportunity for you to break cover. You need not be a sales pro at present, we're interested in your future not your background. You must be able to demonstrate the initiative it takes for effective sales.
You'll start off in our Schaumburg Branch office where you'll be trained in FHA/VA and conventional mortgage loan financing of new and existing homes, selling our services to real estate brokers, builders and Realtors and supervise a clerical staff.
We offer a fine starting salary and commission designed to provide an income in the $11 000 $14 000 range with $18 000 $25 000 a realistic goal in 3 years.
There's profit sharing, expense account and generous fringe benefits and the opportunity to advance within our organization.

Invitation expected despite rift

Young plans South Africa trip

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young said Monday he believes he will be permitted to visit South Africa despite having irked the Johannesburg government.

Young, who recently caused an uproar by calling the white South African government "illegimate," also denied he has been advised to tone down his comments.

"I've been encouraged to speak as controversially as possible by the President," he said.

Although South Africa has not granted Young permission to keep a speaking engagement in Johannesburg, he emerged from a meeting of the congressional Black Caucus and said, "I'll be going. What I do there will depend on the people who invited me."

A COMPLICATING factor in the Young trip is believed to be Vice President Walter Mondale's planned meeting May 19 in Vienna with South African Premier John Vorster.

Young's trip to South Africa is expected to be at the same time, and United States officials reportedly do not want Young — with his penchant for controversial statements — to upset the Vienna meeting.

Although he does not yet know whether he will be permitted to visit South Africa, Young is undertaking a 12-day trip through black Africa.

The State Dept. said Monday it is talking to South Africa about the situation.

"We are still working on that and have requested from the South African government permission for the visit of Ambassador Young," said State Dept. spokesman Frederick Z. Brown. "We are awaiting their reply."

YOUNG'S SPOKESMAN at the United Nations said the Ambassador would get final word Tuesday on his visit to Johannesburg.

Young's first stop on the trip starting Monday night is Abidjan, the Ivory Coast, for a briefing session with United States ambassadors stationed in the African continent. He will visit Ghana, Nigeria and Gabon for talks with "high government officials," then fly to Lisbon for a meeting with Vice President Walter Mondale who oversees the Carter administration's African policy.

The principal destination of Young's trip is Maputo, Mozambique, where he will attend on May 16-21 a U.N.-sponsored conference in support of black majority rules in Rhodesia and Namibia (South West Africa).

FROM MAPUTO, Young had planned to fly May 20 for a private visit to Jahannesburg, where he had been invited to speak before the city's business community and students of Witwatersrand University.

Brown said he was not aware of any Young plans to meet with South African officials and black leaders there — if he goes.

Young's plans to meet with black leaders during the Johannesburg visit and his earlier remarks that the South African government is "illegitimate" drew angry reaction from South Africa. Foreign Minister Roelof "Pik" Botha expressed Young's visit would not be "convenient."

But after being contacted by the State Dept., Botha modified the position, said Young's visit request would have to go through "normal channels."

Brown said the visit still is considered "private," although he conceded there is "a fine line" between public and private visit "given the connotations and since a high public official (Young) is involved."

Brown said if Young does go to South Africa, he will not be traveling aboard the official United States aircraft he is using for his current African tour.

Miss Thomas died Monday in an automobile accident near Antioch, Ill.

Survivors include: her parents, James and Mary Thomas; brothers, Jerry, Donald and Larry Hooker; a sister, Vickie Nurczyk; and grandparents, Roy and Leone Thomas and Eula Milligan.

Visitation will be from 4 to 9:30 p.m. today at the funeral home.

William Weber buried Monday

One of the Northwest suburbs last pioneers, William M. Weber, 79, was buried Monday in Wheeling Township Cemetery, Arlington Heights.

Weber, an Arlington Heights resident, was active in Wheeling Township Republican activities. He was a justice of the peace for 30 years and served as Wheeling Township supervisor and tax collector.

Weber died Friday at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights.

Panel's discreet inquiry into King murder begins

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Investigators for the House Assassinations Committee slipped quietly into town Monday to begin a week-long review of events surrounding the 1968 assassination of civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

The Washington office for the committee confirmed investigators were sent to Memphis Monday, but would release no details. The exact whereabouts of investigators was not known.

Rep. Harold Ford, D-Tenn., a committee member, said investigators would "treat King's death as a homicide case" and planned to "reconstruct the scene of the crime at the Lorraine Motel."

BEFORE THE team left Washington, Gene Johnson, assistant chief deputy counsel to the committee, said investigators wanted to conduct their review quietly.

"We didn't want anyone to know we were coming down there," he said.

Ron Walter, an aide working in Ford's Memphis office, confirmed the team arrived Monday but said no further information would be released because the investigators wanted "to keep a low profile."

THE COMMITTEE staff investigators last week made their fifth visit to Brushy Mountain State Prison at Petros, Tenn., where they interviewed James Earl Ray, the convicted assassin of King who is trying to win a new trial.

Ray, who swapped a 99-year prison term for the guilty plea in 1969, now claims he did not fire a rifle that killed King as the Nobel Peace prize winner stood on the motel balcony.

Jack Kershaw, Ray's latest defense lawyer, said the committee plans to talk with Willie Green, 66, who worked at a service station near the motel the day of the King murder.

Green, an elderly black man, saw Ray at the time of the slaying, Kershaw says, and could give Ray an alibi.

But Green said Monday he still has not been contacted by the House Committee staff and that he saw a man matching Ray's description only after King was shot.

FORD SAID the investigators would talk with others who may have been in the downtown area when King was shot.

"They will try to locate and question witnesses who were at the boarding house, the nearby fire station and the motel," he said. "They will be questioned in terms of what they have already said."

The investigators also planned to read through case files at the Shelby County attorney general's office and take into custody material evidence, Ford said.

The Remington 30-06 allegedly used in the killing was turned over to the committee March 10 along with all criminal court files and evidence used in the Ray trial.

Girl, 15, dies in auto crash that killed boyfriend, 16

Sherri Lee Thomas, 15, died Monday morning, the second half of a "double tragedy" that took the lives of two Wheeling High School students.

Sherri, 397 Thelma Ct., Wheeling, and her boyfriend, Mark A. Wyskup, 16, of 1204 Sarasota Dr., Wheeling, were on a date Sunday to see the races in Antioch. They were traveling a mile south of Ill. Rte. 173 on U.S. Rte. 45, near Milburn, when the accident occured in a line of three cars.

Wyskup's car and another vehicle began to pass the first car at the same time. Wyskup's car clipped the fender of the second car and went out of control. It left the road, traveling on the shoulder, then went into a ditch where the vehicle struck some trees.

Wyskup was killed instantly, according to Lake County Deputy Coroner Barbara Richardson. Miss Thomas died at 12:30 a.m. Monday.

Thomas Shirley, principal of Wheeling High School, called the accident a "double tragedy." No one else was injured in the mishap.

Miss Thomas and Wyskup met at Wheeling High School and had dated for about five months.

More than airline involved in crash suits

by TONI GINNETTI

Second of two parts

The airlines are generally blamed for air accidents, except in court. Today Herald reporters write about the airline industry's efforts to train employes for emergencies and the disaster plans used by area hospitals in case of an aviation disaster.

To the layman who uses air transportation, a plane crash would seem the obvious fault of an airline.

The years that it takes to resolve wrongful death claims filed in the wake of commercial air disasters are the best proof of the fallacy of that reasoning.

While an airline typically is the prime defendant named, manufacturers of aircraft, fuel manufacturers, even the U.S. government which employs air traffic controllers through the Federal Aviation Administration, commonly are named as defendants.

DOMESTIC AIR CRASH litigation generally is filed in federal court because of the cross-state residency of victims and airline headquarters. In Cook County, however, a number of cases are filed in the state circuit court because many airlines have offices in Chicago.

THERE ARE generally two steps to resolving airline litigation. The establishment of liability for an accident must first be determined, then individual damage claims are settled.

"Early on the liability is usually resolved, and then the cases will lie around for years resolving damages," according to noted personal injury attorney Philip H. Coorby. "It's not the cast itself that's taking so long, it's the resolution of the damages."

Liability "is the major hurdle," according to Wallace E. Maloney, an expert in air litigation who represents airlines. If an airline is "obviously liable" for a mishap, "there is no sense in prolonging it," Maloney said. "It's a matter of 'get out the check book.' "

IN THE 1968 CRASH of a North Central Airlines converted turbo-prop jet at O'Hare Airport, lawsuits named four parties as defendants. They included the airline; General Motors Corp., which converted the craft; Pacific Airmotive Corp., a subcontractor of GM; and General Dynamics Corp., the craft's original builder.

Only the airline was found liable.

Some 95 per cent of all suits are settled out of court, but attorneys will disagree on the "psychology" of delaying settlements.

Hospitals set for disaster at O'Hare

by KURT BAER

Resurrection Hospital, on Chicago's Far Northwest Side, sits in the middle of a "disaster triangle."

To the north, Chicago and North Western Ry. trains rumble night and day; to the south stretches the Kennedy Expressway and the Chicago Transit Authority's Jefferson Park train line; and in the west, the world's busiest airport, O'Hare Field, buzzes with take-offs and landings.

Resurrection is O'Hare's hospital, and twice it has had to implement disaster plans because of crashes at the airport.

• Dec. 27, 1968, a North Central Airlines twin-engine turboprop plane crashed into a Braniff International Airlines hangar while attempting to land in a heavy fog. Twenty-seven of the 45 persons on board the plane were killed.

• Dec. 20, 1972, a North Central Airlines DC-9 collided with a Delta Airlines Convair 880 on the runway, killing 10 of the passengers on the North Central jet.

IN BOTH INSTANCES, the dead and the injured were brought to Resurrection's door, the hospital closest to O'Hare.

A telephone call from police and fire officials initially alerts the hospital. "A Code Zero is sounded and all the supervisors, nurses and doctors available respond to the emergency room," says Sister Donna Marie, Resurrection's assistant director of nursing.

Injuries are assessed and assigned priority for treatment according to a system known as "Triage." Persons needing immediate life-saving treatment are cared for first, followed by those who require immediate surgery, X-ray, minimal treatment and observation, treatment and release.

EVERY HOSPITAL is required to have a disaster plan and to practice it, says John Wilke, chairman of the mass casualty committee at Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge.

"If your plan is not practiced and not put to use, it might as well sit on the shelf," says Wilke. "It's easy to think of disaster planning as just another committee. But when the time actually comes, that's when the benefits are reaped."

Lutheran General, as well as Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines, and Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, are back-up hospitals for Resurrection in airport injury cases. Four members of the North Central crew injured in the 1973 crash were brought to Lutheran General for treatment.

CODE YELLOW sounds the mass casualty alert at Lutheran General.

Volberding consultant bill rapped

Two city council committees, meeting in joint session Monday night, voted to recommend the city not pay a Chicago consulting firm for a transition study it is currently making for Mayor Herbert H. Volberding. The study is expected to cost less than $3,000.

Volberding Monday admitted he acted in haste when, as mayor-elect, he hired the firm of Pandolfi, Weiss & Co., to write a transitional report, but defended the basic need for that report.

"I now know it was probably a premature action, but I think it was the action of a prudent individual," Volberding said.

Four committee members from the city code and judiciary committee and the finance committee voted against spending the money, with only Ald. Richard Ward, 8th, voting for the spending. Aldermen who voted against paying for the study were Gerald Meyer, Kenneth Kehe, 2nd; Daniel Kisslinger, 4th; and John Seitz, 7th.

MEMBERS OF THE two committees grilled Volberding and representatives of the firm on the issues surrounding the report.

Their questions centered on several unresolved controversies: Why did he take the action as mayor-elect without first consulting the council? Was it appropriate for the mayor-elect to hire people who had been involved in his campaign to make such a study? Was such a study needed or could it have been done better by current city department heads or by the mayor himself?

Ald. Gerald Meyer, 7th, said former Acting Mayor Charles J. Bolek did not need a transitional report when he came to office last August, and Volberding shouldn't have needed one either. Bolek was elected by the city council following former Mayor Herbert H. Behrel's early retirement.

"At that particular time, there was no transition report needed. The transition was very smooth because Mr. Bolek had the knowledge and the expertise to do the job," Meyer said, adding, "I was led to believe during the campaign that Mr. Volberding had the knowledge and expertise to do the job."

Volberding said he ordered the study because he didn't think Bolek could give him the information he needed.

5 years probation for Patty Hearst

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst was sentenced Monday to five years probation for two charges stemming from a 1974 crime spree.

Miss Hearst, 23, flanked by her two attorneys, stood and faced the judge to hear the sentence that could have been life in prison.

She had pleaded "no contest" April 18 to charges of assault with a deadly weapon and robbery while a member of the Symbionese Liberation Army. Nine other charges, including assault, robbery and kidnaping, were dismissed at the time of sentencing.

JUDGE E. TALBOT Callister sentenced her to five years probation on each of two counts with several conditions, including financial restitution to the owner of a sporting goods store she peppered with machine gun fire.

Other conditions were that she seek training or schooling and maintain a residence under the direction of the probation officer.

"I have been a criminal judge for nearly seven years," Judge E. Talbot Callister said. "During that time, I don't remember how many people I have sentenced, but it must be several thousand. None of those decisions has been more difficult than the one that faces me today."

He said he was convinced Miss Hearst would be in physical danger if she were to be jailed.

"SHE IS NOT A present or a future law enforcement risk," Callister said, adding that all law enforcement agencies involved in the case agreed that further confinement was not necessary.

Dressed in a long tan skirt and brown sweater, Miss Hearst sat quietly through the court proceeding Monday and arose to say only, "Yes, your honor," when asked if she was ready for sentencing.

Albert Johnson, who has defended Miss Hearst here, said he decided on the "no contest" plea because he was convinced she could not get a fair

Cop union chief arrested again for drunken driving

John Flood

John J. Flood, president of the Combined Counties Police Assn., again has been arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated and improper lane usage.

Flood, 36, of 407 Killarney, Mundelein, was driving northbound on Arlington Heights Road, just south of Checker Drive Saturday when his car was clocked by Buffalo Grove police speeding 43 miles per hour in a 35 mile-per-hour zone.

Patrolman Walter Grochowski reported that he pulled Flood's car over after he saw it traveling on an "unsure" path.

POLICE SAID THERE was a heavy odor of alcohol on Flood's breath as he "staggered" from his car about 4 a.m. He then was placed under arrest and brought back to the Buffalo Grove police station where he was charged with speeding, improper lane usage, drunken driving, refusing to take a breathalyzer test and battery.

Flood was charged with battery after he allegedly grabbed Sgt. Peter Lippert around the neck with his hands at the police station and said "Don't tell me what to do."

Police said Flood was uncooperative during arrest procedures and several times requested police not charge him with the drunken driving count.

Flood is scheduled to appear in the Arlington Heights branch of the Cook County Circuit Court June 21 at 11 a.m. He is free after posting a $1,000 bond Saturday.

FLOOD SAID MONDAY he would not comment on the charges on advice of his attorneys.

"All I can really say is that I'll go to court and stand trial on these (charges)," said Flood, a Cook County Sheriff's policeman on leave.

The CCPA president was arrested by Mundelein police Oct. 6 for drunken driving and improper lane usage after his car struck another car in a parking lot. Flood was placed in a municipal lockup after refusing to be fingerprinted or photographed.

Flood also was charged with leaving the scene of an accident in connection with the collision. All three charges were consolidated and are scheduled to be heard in the Waukegan branch of Lake County Circuit Court May 17.

The CCPA, the only organization of its kind in the Chicago area, was formed in 1969 by Flood, who left his job as sergeant for Cook County to devote full time to the union.

The organization has grown to more than 2,000 members and represents 50 chapters, including Wheeling, Des Plaines and Mount Prospect. Mundelein and Buffalo Grove are not members of the CCPA.

School closing priorities listed

by RENA COHEN

No schools should be closed immediately in Des Plaines Dist. 62 but Central, South and West elementary schools could be shut down if enrollments continue to decline, according to a citizens' advisory committee.

The 25-member committee, appointed last November by the Dist. 62 Board of Education to study the impact of declining enrollment on district finances, instead ranked the 13 schools in the district in four priority groupings if closings are necessary and recommended annual evaluation of the enrollment picture based on 14 criteria.

Disclosure of the committee's findings comes a week after the publication of a report by a 15-member teachers committee which did not recommend closing schools or name any buildings that could be closed if it became necessary.

The teachers' report, dated April 29, instead stressed alternative uses of empty classrooms and said there are "no clear and present financial problems" that jeopardize the status of any of the schools.

DICK BOSOLD, chairman of the teachers committee, said the group foresees no school closings for at least two years. He said he anticipates the district's financial situation will avert closings for four or five years.

"But I get the feeling the citizens' committee feels there will have to be a school closing fairly soon," Bosood said. "From what I've heard, I feel strongly the citizens' committee will name a school for closing the year after next (1979)."

Enrollment in Dist. 62 schools plummeted 21 per cent from 1970 to 1976 and is expected to drop by another 30 per cent by the 1980-81 school year. That would leave 4,173 students in the district, which at its peak in 1969 had trict now has about 5,500 students.

The declining enrollment steadily has eroded the district's state aid, said Harold Brieschke, director of business services for the district.

Brieschke said that situation, combined with dwindling tax revenues, could create severe financial problems within five years, although the district education fund historically has had a surplus.

THREE SEPARATE reports financed by the district's teacher union recently have termed the district's surplus excessive. Brieschke said he has had difficulty evaluating those reports because they lacked documentation.

The teachers advisory committee, which based its findings largely upon those three financial reports from consultants at Northwestern and Loyola universities and the Illinois Education Assn., submitted its recommendations to the school board Monday night.

The citizens' advisory committee will present its report to the board May 23. Committee chairwoman Margaret Wagner said the recommendations will include:

- More comprehensive evaluation procedures for the district's teaching staff. Currently evaluations are informal and loosely defined, Wagner said.
- A stress on more effective use of district resources, rather than saving money. Wagner said the committee proposed "more creative" use of the district's working cash fund, earned interest and advanced tax collections. "They should do more than just gather interest," she said.
- Priorities for school closings. After Central, South and West, which are located at the center of the city, the committee recommended closing North, Orchard Place, Plainfield and Terrace schools because they are at the outer periphery of the district; then Cumberland, Forest and Maple, which adjoin junior high schools and are valuable because of the flexibility they provide; and finally the junior high schools, which are "most effectively utilized" and should be the last schools considered for closing, the committee said.

Dist. 62 seeks teachers' recommendations on needs

The Des Plaines Dist. 62 Board of Education Monday night questioned members of the teachers' advisory committee about their recommendations for staffing and physical facilities with discussion wandering back to the committee's assumptions about the district's financial situation.

The committee decided the district does not need to concern itself with money problems or school closings despite its declining enrollment for at least two years.

While neither board members nor Supt. Eric Sahlberg disagreed, there was some question about the three outside reports which formed the basis for that conclusion.

"THE IMPLICATION in your committee report is that the district is sound financially, so don't worry, citizens of Dist. 62," Sahlberg told members of the committee at the meeting.

"Then you say support for this position is found in the consultants' reports.

"THEN I look for the information on which these conclusions are based. Maybe it's there but I don't see it. On what grounds are we financially sound for the next two or three years? What credence is given to the inflation factor? What credence is given to state funding or lack thereof?"

Sahlberg was referring to reports commissioned by the district teachers' union from consultants at Loyola University, Northwestern University and the Illinois Education Assn.

Sahlberg also questioned the committee's two-year planning horizon. Sahlberg advocates a five-year plan, with two-year plans to make necessary adjustments to the longer plans.

BOARD MEMBER and finance committee chairman Wallace Meyer also questioned the committee's emphasis on the increase in assessed valuation revenue to the district.

"The assessed valuation might be going up, but the (state aid) equalizer is going down," Meyer said. That would mean a decrease in state aid to the district.

ASKED AFTER the meeting whether he was disappointed the committee did not give the board some guidelines in case the continuing declining enrollment forces school closings, Meyer said, "I don't think we thought anyone would recommend what schools to close, but I might have wished they'd have come to grips with it more."

John Pacay, head of the subcommittee which made the recommendations of use of classrooms and school buildings, said the teachers "were not prepared to say there should only be two empty classrooms per building."

PACAY SAID the committee had tried to devise an efficiency formula to determine when a school should be closed but had failed.

The board also questioned the committee closely about other recommendations, including proposals for remedial, gifted and multicultural programs.

The board's long range planning committee will be considering the teachers' recommendations and those of a citizen advisory group in laying plans for the district's future.

Crossing guard will take her case to court May 23

by SCOTT FOSDICK

Crossing guard Fran Bernstein, who has accused a Maine Township man of assault by attempting to run her down while she was helping children cross the street, will take her case to court May 23.

The case is scheduled to be heard before Judge Simon Porter in the Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Mrs. Bernstein, an East Maine Dist. 63 crossing guard, said she was helping several children cross Church Street at the corner of Bumble Bee Drive one morning last month when Lee Snyder, 9148 Church St., Des Plaines, refused to honor her stop sign and almost ran her down.

"HE PUT his foot on the gas and came right at me. I jumped out of the way," Mrs. Bernstein said. "He could have hit me if I'd fallen down."

The incident started, Mrs. Bernstein said, with Snyder honking his horn several times as she was helping a large group of children cross the street.

Mrs. Bernstein said Snyder yelled at her to get out of the way because he was "late for work." When she refused, she said he shouted, " 'I'm not waiting for those kids to get across!' "

WHEN SHE refused to move, she said he drove straight toward her. She got out of the way quickly. No one was hurt because all of the smaller children were already across, and a group of older children were waiting at the curb, watching the argument.

An attempt by The Herald to talk to Snyder Monday was unsuccessful.

This is the second time this year that a motorist has been accused of refusing to stop for a crossing guard in the Northwest suburbs. Linda McElderry, 19, of Elk Grove Village, March 24 was found guilty of disobeying an Elk Grove Village crossing guard's order to stop. She will be sentenced May 26.

MRS. BERNSTEIN said most crossing guards have learned to live with discourteous drivers.

"I've had people who have run my stop sign. Or they'll give me the finger, or yell at me. It happens to all the crossing guards," she said. "We're out there because we want to help the children. It's sad, it really is."

Mrs. Bernstein is being represented by Dist. 63 attorney, Jerome Robbins.

More than airline involved in crash suits

by TONI GINNETTI

Second of two parts

The airlines are generally blamed for air accidents, except in court. Today Herald reporters write about the airline industry's efforts to train employes for emergencies and the disaster plans used by area hospitals in case of an aviation disaster.

To the layman who uses air transportation, a plane crash would seem the obvious fault of an airline.

The years that it takes to resolve wrongful death claims filed in the wake of commercial air disasters are the best proof of the fallacy of that reasoning.

While an airline typically is the prime defendant named, manufacturers of aircraft, fuel manufacturers, even the U.S. government which employs air traffic controllers through the Federal Aviation Administration, commonly are named as defendants.

DOMESTIC AIR CRASH litigation generally is filed in federal court because of the cross-state residency of victims and airline headquarters. In Cook County, however, a number of cases are filed in the state circuit court because many airlines have offices in Chicago.

THERE ARE generally two steps to resolving airline litigation. The establishment of liability for an accident must first be determined, then individual damage claims are settled.

"Early on the liability is usually resolved, and then the cases will lie around for years resolving damages," according to noted personal injury attorney Philip H. Coorby. "It's not the cast itself that's taking so long, it's the resolution of the damages."

Liability "is the major hurdle," according to Wallace E. Maloney, an expert in air litigation who represents airlines. If an airline is "obviously liable" for a mishap, "there is no sense in prolonging it," Maloney said. "It's a matter of 'get out the check book.'"

IN THE 1968 CRASH of a North Central Airlines converted turbo-prop jet at O'Hare Airport, lawsuits named four parties as defendants. They included the airline; General Motors Corp., which converted the craft; Pacific Airmotive Corp., a subcontractor of GM; and General Dynamics Corp., the craft's original builder.

Only the airline was found liable.

Some 95 per cent of all suits are settled out of court, but attorneys will disagree on the "psychology" of delaying settlements.

Hospitals set for disaster at O'Hare

by KURT BAER

Resurrection Hospital, on Chicago's Far Northwest Side, sits in the middle of a "disaster triangle."

To the north, Chicago and North Western Ry. trains rumble night and day; to the south stretches the Kennedy Expressway and the Chicago Transit Authority's Jefferson Park train line; and in the west, the world's busiest airport, O'Hare Field, buzzes with take-offs and landings.

Resurrection is O'Hare's hospital, and twice it has had to implement disaster plans because of crashes at the airport.

• Dec. 27, 1968, a North Central Airlines twin-engine turboprop plane crashed into a Braniff International Airlines hangar while attempting to land in a heavy fog. Twenty-seven of the 45 persons on board the plane were killed.

• Dec. 20, 1972, a North Central Airlines DC-9 collided with a Delta Airlines Convair 880 on the runway, killing 10 of the passengers on the North Central jet.

IN BOTH INSTANCES, the dead and the injured were brought to Resurrection's door, the hospital closest to O'Hare.

A telephone call from police and fire officials initially alerts the hospital. "A Code Zero is sounded and all the supervisors, nurses and doctors available respond to the emergency room," says Sister Donna Marie, Resurrection's assistant director of nursing.

Injuries are assessed and assigned priority for treatment according to a system known as "Triage." Persons needing immediate life-saving treatment are cared for first, followed by those who require immediate surgery, X-ray, minimal treatment and observation, treatment and release.

EVERY HOSPITAL is required to have a disaster plan and to practice it, says John Wilke, chairman of the mass casualty committee at Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge.

"If your plan is not practiced and not put to use, it might as well sit on the shelf," says Wilke. "It's easy to think of disaster planning as just another committee. But when the time actually comes, that's when the benefits are reaped."

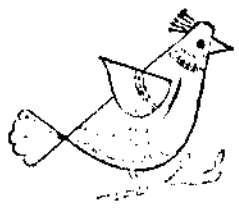

Lutheran General, as well as Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines, and Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, are back-up hospitals for Resurrection in airport injury cases. Four members of the North Central crew injured in the 1973 crash were brought to Lutheran General for treatment.

CODE YELLOW sounds the mass casualty alert at Lutheran General.

Patrolmen to get 6% pay raise

Wheeling patrolmen will get a 6 per cent pay increase in their pay checks beginning Friday.

The increase will be the first step in a two-part 11.5 per cent pay increase approved in an ordinance adopted Monday night by the village board.

The ordinance formally ratifies an agreement reached in January after two months of salary negotiations between village officials and police.

Village Mgr. Terry Zerkle said the ordinance affects only the salary portion of the contract. Other provisions of the agreement, including an upgrading of insurance terms and the deduction of union and credit union dues from police pay checks, were approved earlier this year by the board.

The wage increase, to be paid in two increments, affects only the 28 patrolmen in the police department. The other 16 employes in the department, including officers, radio operators and record clerks must negotiate a separate contract, Zerkle said.

Under the new wage contract the top base pay for a Wheeling patrolman will increase from $16,620 to $18,540.

Wheeling patrolmen have not received a raise since August 1975 when they were granted a 5 per cent increase.

THE FIRST PART of the salary increase, or 6 per cent, will be effective in Friday's pay checks. A second raise of 5.5 per cent goes into effect Nov. 1.

"The money is available and has been budgeted," Zerkle said. "An ordinance is necesssary to grant any raise. This is just a formality, a final ratification."

Under the new pay package, patrolmen will be paid biweekly instead of twice monthly as in the past. As a result, they will be paid 26 rather than 24 times annually.

– Talks still are under way for a pay increase for higher-ranking officers including lieutenants and sergeants. However, no offer has been brought to the board for approval.

DEDUCTION OF UNION dues from pay, a practice that was ended last spring, will be made only for the Wheeling Police Dept. Employes Assn., an internal police organization, and not the Combined Counties Police Assn.

The village board does not recognize the CCPA as the sole bargaining representative of Wheeling policemen.

5 years probation for Patty Hearst

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst was sentenced Monday to five years probation for two charges stemming from a 1974 crime spree.

Miss Hearst, 23, flanked by her two attorneys, stood and faced the judge to hear the sentence that could have been life in prison.

She had pleaded "no contest" April 18 to charges of assault with a deadly weapon and robbery while a member of the Symbionese Liberation Army. Nine other charges, including assault, robbery and kidnaping, were dismissed at the time of sentencing.

JUDGE E. TALBOT Callister sentenced her to five years probation on each of two counts with several conditions, including financial restitution to the owner of a sporting goods store she peppered with machine gun fire.

Other conditions were that she seek training or schooling and maintain a residence under the direction of the probation officer.

"I have been a criminal judge for nearly seven years," Judge E. Talbot Callister said. "During that time, I don't remember how many people I have sentenced, but it must be several thousand. None of those decisions has been more difficult than the one that faces me today."

He said he was convinced Miss Hearst would be in physical danger if she were to be jailed.

"SHE IS NOT A present or a future law enforcement risk," Callister said, adding that all law enforcement agencies involved in the case agreed that further confinement was not necessary.

Dressed in a long tan skirt and brown sweater, Miss Hearst sat quietly through the court proceeding Monday and arose to say only, "Yes, your honor," when asked if she was ready for sentencing.

Albert Johnson, who has defended Miss Hearst here, said he decided on the "no contest" plea because he was convinced she could not get a fair

Cop union chief arrested again for drunken driving

John Flood

John J. Flood, president of the Combined Counties Police Assn., again has been arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated and improper lane usage.

Flood, 36, of 407 Killarney, Mundelein, was driving northbound on Arlington Heights Road, just south of Checker Drive Saturday when his car was clocked by Buffalo Grove police speeding 43 miles per hour in a 35 mile-per-hour zone.

Patrolman Walter Grochowski reported that he pulled Flood's car over after he saw it traveling on an "unsure" path.

POLICE SAID THERE was a heavy odor of alcohol on Flood's breath as he "staggered" from his car about 4 a.m. He then was placed under arrest and brought back to the Buffalo Grove police station where he was charged with speeding, improper lane usage, drunken driving, refusing to take a breathalyzer test and battery.

Flood was charged with battery after he allegedly grabbed Sgt. Peter Lippert around the neck with his hands at the police station and said "Don't tell me what to do."

Police said Flood was uncooperative during arrest procedures and several times requested police not charge him with the drunken driving count.

Flood is scheduled to appear in the Arlington Heights branch of the Cook County Circuit Court June 21 at 11 a.m. He is free after posting a $1,000 bond Saturday.

FLOOD SAID MONDAY he would not comment on the charges on advice of his attorneys.

"All I can really say is that I'll go to court and stand trial on these (charges)," said Flood, a Cook County Sheriff's policeman on leave.

The CCPA president was arrested by Mundelein police Oct. 6 for drunken driving and improper lane usage after his car struck another car in a parking lot. Flood was placed in a municipal lockup after refusing to be fingerprinted or photographed.

Flood also was charged with leaving the scene of an accident in connection with the collision. All three charges were consolidated and are scheduled to be heard in the Waukegan branch of Lake County Circuit Court May 17.

The CCPA, the only organization of its kind in the Chicago area, was formed in 1969 by Flood, who left his job as sergeant for Cook County to devote full time to the union.

The organization has grown to more than 2,000 members and represents 50 chapters, including Wheeling, Des Plaines and Mount Prospect. Mundelein and Buffalo Grove are not members of the CCPA.

Pay hikes boost township budget

Salary hikes for Wheeling Township officials, election year expenses and publication of a quarterly newsletter have resulted in a 5 per cent increase in the 1977-78 township budget.

Already tentatively approved, the $436,775 budget is $24,157 more than last year's budget of $412,598. It will be considered at a public hearing May 24.

Township Supervisor Ethel Kolerus said in spite of the added expenses, the current town fund tax levy of about 7 cents per $100 assessed valuation probably will not increase.

The April election cost the township $31,125, about half of that for election judge salaries.

THE SALARIES of all elected officials were increased at a board meeting in March. The officials will receive only part of the increase this year, however, because the new salaries went into effect following the April 5 election. The township's fiscal year begins March 1.

Mrs. Kolerus, for example, will receive $18,000 this year instead of the $21,000 salary approved for the supervisor in March. Her 1976-77 salary was $12,500.

Other township officials' salaries for 1977-78 include: Highway Comr. Arthur Olsen, $17,000, up from $14,000 last year; Assessor Marshall Theroux, $15,250, up from $14,500 last year; and Clerk Dorothy Hauff, $7,560, up from $6,000. The board of trustees will earn $40 per meeting this year, amounting to an extra $1,400 in the new budget. They received $35 per meeting last year.

Publication of the Wheeling Township Quarterly Report this year will increase from $12,000 last year to $25,000 in 1977-78. The township began publishing the newsletter last fall.

THE YOUTH Committee will receive a $9,630 boost from last year's allocation of $70,000.

A line item of $175,000 for the township's new building is included in the 1977-78 budget. But Mrs. Kolerus said the amount will not be included in the tax levy. The $175,000 was the amount the township received from the sale of the old township hall, 1818 E. Northwest Hwy.

The township's general assistance fund drops from $241,570 last year to $144,250 in the new budget, a 40 per cent decrease.

Lower rental fees and utility costs are the main reason for the decreased general assistance budget. Four social service agencies formerly located in rented facilities in the area now are housed in the new building, the Wheeling Township Community Service Center, 1616 N. Arlington Heights Rd.

Rental costs totaled $71,052 in the general assistance fund last year. Rents will tally only $30,000 in the new budget. The costs of utilities also is expected to decrease, from $19,920 last year to $10,000 in 1977-78.

The township will allocate $269,901 in federal revenue-sharing funds at the May 24 hearing. About $78,197 of that total is earmarked for services for the poor and elderly and $157,000 will go toward mental health.

Woman seeks missing heiress

Psychic foretells Brach death

by JOHN LAMPINEN

Irene Diamond is convinced that missing heiress Helen Voorhees Brach is dead, the victim of a rejected suitor.

Glenview Police Chief William Bartlett believes that theory is fine, but he would rather have some evidence to back it up.

Bartlett has been getting calls from psychics and astrologers like Mrs. Diamond since late March when news of Mrs. Brach's disappearance began making headlines.

"I NEVER KNEW there were so many in the area," he says. "They all call. The only thing is, none of them can tell me where Mrs. Brach is."

Mrs. Brach, 65, has not been seen since Feb. 21, when her houseman, Jack Matlick, who lives on the Brach family farm in Schaumburg Township, says he drove her to O'Hare Airport to catch a plane to Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

Mrs. Diamond, 54, of Hoffman Estates has been practicing astrology for several years. She is known locally for her campaigns for village president, in which she has run and lost — despite predictions of victory — under her real name, Irene Petke.

She got interested in the Brach case a few weeks ago and says sho wants to do something about it because of the "intrigue."

"It can also give validity to astrology," she adds.

INITIALLY, SHE tried to "communicate" with Mrs. Brach and she received "several impressions," she says. Those "impressions" told her:

"Mrs. Brach may still be alive and kept hidden somewhere against her will. He (her captor) made advances to her, and she resisted, and that made him mad."

However, to pin down her location and get more details of what happened, Mrs. Diamond says she must get inside the Brach mansion in Glenview so she can "reenact what happened."

Ten days ago, Mrs. Diamond was going to go to Glenview, represent herself as an old family friend and try to get into the house.

Some friends warned her against that, however, and then Mrs. Diamond noticed that there was a full moon last Tuesday.

"ERRATIC THINGS do come with the full moon, and there was no need to take a chance," she says, so she delayed her expedition.

Late last week, she picked up the expedition again and went out to the 100-acre Schaumburg farm where Matlick and his family live. She is a licensed real estate salesman, and she asked if the farm was for sale. She was told that it was not, that it never would be and that she could not enter.

Sunday night, she had a friend from Des Plaines drive her to the house in Glenview. A gray-haired woman in a white uniform and a sweater met her at the door.

"I was supposed to be a guest for the weekend with Helen Brach," Mrs. Diamond said.

THE WOMAN looked incredulous.

"Don't you read the papers?" she demanded.

"About what?" Mrs. Diamond asked.

Again, she was unable to get in. She remains undaunted. She phoned Bartlett Monday to pass along her information and to try to get some from him to help her investigation.

Meanwhile, the past couple of days have convinced Mrs. Diamond that Mrs. Brach is no longer alive. She has been receiving "death signs" the past three days, she says, and it could mean that Mrs. Brach has been killed by her captor.

SHE SAYS SHE even knows the name of Mrs. Brach's killer. He is a man Mrs. Diamond describes as "violent and obsessed" with "sadistic tendencies" and the ability to be a "terrific actor."

She told Bartlett of her suspect; he told her he has to go on evidence.

And so far, Bartlett says, there isn't much of that. Asked about the status of the case, he replied: "quo."

The department's investigation has included a search of the Schaumburg farm both by foot and by helicopter.

"We don't have any evidence of one kind or another," Bartlett says.

While a number of psychics and astrologers have called, he says he generally is a "skeptic" about their accuracy. A couple have asked to hold something belonging to Mrs. Brach to help them receive "vibrations," and Bartlett says police have complied with the request.

"BUT WE HAVEN'T come up with anything because of it," he adds.

"They mean well."

Mrs. Diamond plans to continue her investigation although she is not sure "what the next step will be."

There will be an adjustment in her plan of attack, however. She is shunning the use of cover stories and will no longer hide the fact that she is an astrologer.

"The truth will set us free," she says. "Secretiveness is what creates the problems in people's lives."

Crossing guard will take case to court May 23

by SCOTT FOSDICK

Crossing guard Fran Bernstein, who has accused a Maine Township man of assault by attempting to run her down while she was helping children cross the street, will take her case to court May 23.

The case is scheduled to be heard before Judge Simon Porter in the Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Mrs. Bernstein, an East Maine Dist. 63 crossing guard, said she was helping several children cross Church Street at the corner of Bumble Bee Drive one morning last month when Lee Snyder, 9148 Church St., Des Plaines, refused to honor her stop sign and almost ran her down.

"HE PUT his foot on the gas and came right at me. I jumped out of the way," Mrs. Bernstein said. "He could have hit me if I'd fallen down."

The incident started, Mrs. Bernstein said, with Snyder honking his horn several times as she was helping a large group of children cross the street.

Mrs. Bernstein said Snyder yelled at her to get out of the way because he was "late for work." When she refused, she said he shouted, " 'I'm not waiting for those kids to get across!' "

WHEN SHE refused to move, she said he drove straight toward her. She got out of the way quickly. No one was hurt because all of the smaller children were already across, and a group of older children were waiting at the curb, watching the argument.

An attempt by The Herald to talk to Snyder Monday was unsuccessful.

This is the second time this year that a motorist has been accused of refusing to stop for a crossing guard in the Northwest suburbs. Linda McElderry, 19, of Elk Grove Village, March 24 was found guilty of disobeying an Elk Grove Village crossing guard's order to stop. She will be sentenced May 26.

MRS. BERNSTEIN said most crossing guards have learned to live with discourteous drivers.

"I've had people who have run my stop sign. Or they'll give me the finger, or yell at me. It happens to all the crossing guards," she said. "We're out there because we want to help the children. It's sad, it really is."

Mrs. Bernstein is being represented by Dist. 63 attorney, Jerome Robbins.

Letter campaign to back nursing home

A letter-writing campaign is being started by Lake County officials in their battle to save the Winchester House county nursing home.

County officials are urging residents to write to Illinois Senators Charles Percy and Adlai Stevenson III this week to demonstrate areawide support for the Winchester House.

A hot line has been established at 689-6338 so anyone interested in helping save the Winchester House can volunteer.

"WE ARE exhausting every alternative," Norman Geary, county board chairman, said. "If something isn't done to resolve the tehcnical problems HEW (U.S. Dept. of Housing, Education and Welfare) has imposed, we will have to close our nursing home and others in the state are in the same plight."

Janet Morrison, chairwoman of a county board committee for Winchester House, said repeated efforts to contact HEW Sec. Joseph A. Califano have been unsuccessful.

The HEW regulation that caused the financial plight at Winchester House says nursing homes must accept the state public aid payment as payment-in-full for a Medicaid patient.

THE RULE was intended to prevent nursing homes from billing a public aid patient's family, but it also prevents the county's 18 townships from supplementing the public aid payments.

The Illinois Dept. of Public Aid pays a maximum of $21.56 per day per patient, while costs at Winchester House are $31 per day.

The county paid $800,000 to subsidize the home in the last fiscal year, and deficits this fiscal year are expected to reach $1.36 million if no solution is found.

MRS. MORRISON, chairwoman of the county's finance committee, said she will recommend the county close or sell the home if no solution is found by early June.

An agreement reached among townships in McHenry County seemed to offer a solution, but an HEW interpretation obtained by Lake County said the McHenry agreement was illegal.

The McHenry townships had agreed to pay the county nursing home's deficit at the end of the year, based on the number of patient days from each township.

The HEW interpretation said that townships and counties were sub-units of state government and could not supplement the state payment.

LAKE COUNTY has enlisted the help of several other counties.

Winnebago, DuPage, Rock Island, Peoria, DeKalb, McLean, Madison and McHenry counties all have nursing homes in financial trouble and have banded together with Lake County.

A trip to Washington is in the planning stage, with officials from several of the counties. Lt. Gov. Dave O'Neal has also expressed interest in the trip, Geary said.

Lake County has contacted the Health Systems Agency for Kane, Lake and McHenry counties for support, and has received verbal support from the regional HEW office which regulates standards for nursing homes.

A federal court case filed by Lake County against the Illinois Dept. of Public Aid and HEW to change the regulation is pending, but Mrs. Morrison said a ruling may not be in time to save the nursing home.

Saving trees a neighborly project

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

The 17 elm trees on the 400 block of S. Wilie Street in Mount Prospect are still relatively healthy.

And homeowners in the neighborhood hope to keep them that way as long as possible for both esthetic and environmental reasons.

"The trees are part of the whole character of this older part of the village," says Raymond Friend, 414 S. Wilie St. "And there are ecological reasons for wanting to keep a mature tree, too."

Friend and his neighbor Carl Fuerst, 410 S. Wilie St., were the first ones on their block to learn to treat the 50-year-old trees for the prevention of the deadly Dutch Elm Disease. Thanks to the Mount Prospect Public Works Dept., which conducted five save-a-tree seminars, residents now are able to borrow the equipment from the village and buy the chemical necessary to treat their own trees.

"There is a certain pride in those trees," Fuerst said. "Everyone wants to keep them as long as possible. It probably is worth thousands of dollars to a homeowner to have a tree like that in their yards. It makes this a nice place to live."

The village decided to educate residents on the care of elm trees because the public works department lacks the money and manpower to treat all of the nearly 15,000 elms in Mount Prospect.

About 100 trees were lost last year after the Dutch elm disease spread. Mount Prospect's program is believed to be the only one of its kind in the Northwest suburbs.

After attending one of the save-a-tree-sessions, Friend and Fuerst purchased nine gallons of the preventative chemical from the village at $10 a gallon. They said they wanted to have the chemical, Lignason, on hand so they could sell it to other families on their block and treat their neighbors' trees upon request. Only one person refused their offer.

The men, in their spare time and on their days off, already have treated 10 of the elms on their block. The process takes between two and eight hours, depending on the weather and how quickly the tree will accept the 16-gallon solution. Roughly one gallon of Lignason is needed per tree. The remainder of the liquid treatment is water.

More than airline involved in crash suits

by TONI GINNETTI

Second of two parts

The airlines are generally blamed for air accidents, except in court. Today Herald reporters write about the airline industry's efforts to train employees for emergencies and the disaster plans used by area hospitals in case of an aviation disaster.

To the layman who uses air transportation, a plane crash would seem the obvious fault of an airline.

The years that it takes to resolve wrongful death claims filed in the wake of commercial air disasters are the best proof of the fallacy of that reasoning.

While an airline typically is the prime defendant named, manufacturers of aircraft, fuel manufacturers, even the U.S. government which employs air traffic controllers through the Federal Aviation Administration, commonly are named as defendants.

DOMESTIC AIR CRASH litigation generally is filed in federal court because of the cross-state residency of victims and airline headquarters. In Cook County, however, a number of cases are filed in the state circuit court because many airlines have offices in Chicago.

THERE ARE generally two steps to resolving airline litigation. The establishment of liability for an accident must first be determined, then individual damage claims are settled.

"Early on the liability is usually resolved, and then the cases will lie around for years resolving damages," according to noted personal injury attorney Philip H. Coorby. "It's not the cast itself that's taking so long, it's the resolution of the damages."

Liability "is the major hurdle," according to Wallace E. Maloney, an expert in air litigation who represents airlines. If an airline is "obviously liable", for a mishap, "there is no sense in prolonging it," Maloney said. "It's a matter of 'get out the check book.' "

IN THE 1968 CRASH of a North Central Airlines converted turbo-prop jet at O'Hare Airport, lawsuits named four parties as defendants. They included the airline; General Motors Corp., which converted the craft; Pacific Airmotive Corp., a subcontractor of GM; and General Dynamics Corp., the craft's original builder.

Only the airline was found liable.

Some 95 per cent of all suits are settled out of court, but attorneys will disagree on the "psychology" of delaying settlements.

Hospitals set for disaster at O'Hare

by KURT BAER

Resurrection Hospital, on Chicago's Far Northwest Side, sits in the middle of a "disaster triangle."

To the north, Chicago and North Western Ry. trains rumble night and day; to the south stretches the Kennedy Expressway and the Chicago Transit Authority's Jefferson Park train line; and in the west, the world's busiest airport, O'Hare Field, buzzes with take-offs and landings.

Resurrection is O'Hare's hospital, and twice it has had to implement disaster plans because of crashes at the airport.

• Dec. 27, 1968, a North Central Airlines twin-engine turboprop plane crashed into a Braniff International Airlines hangar while attempting to land in a heavy fog. Twenty-seven of the 45 persons on board the plane were killed.

• Dec. 20, 1972, a North Central Airlines DC-9 collided with a Delta Airlines Convair 880 on the runway, killing 10 of the passengers on the North Central jet.

IN BOTH INSTANCES, the dead and the injured were brought to Resurrection's door, the hospital closest to O'Hare.

A telephone call from police and fire officials initially alerts the hospital. "A Code Zero is sounded and all the supervisors, nurses and doctors available respond to the emergency room," says Sister Donna Marie, Resurrection's assistant director of nursing.

Injuries are assessed and assigned priority for treatment according to a system known as "Triage." Persons needing immediate life-saving treatment are cared for first, followed by those who require immediate surgery, X-ray, minimal treatment and observation, treatment and release.

EVERY HOSPITAL is required to have a disaster plan and to practice it, says John Wilke, chairman of the mass casualty committee at Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge.

"If your plan is not practiced and not put to use, it might as well sit on the shelf," says Wilke. "It's easy to think of disaster planning as just another committee. But when the time actually comes, that's when the benefits are reaped."

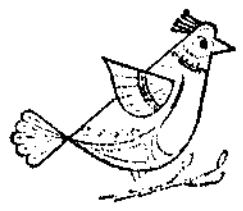

Lutheran General, as well as Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines, and Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, are back-up hospitals for Resurrection in airport injury cases. Four members of the North Central crew injured in the 1973 crash were brought to Lutheran General for treatment.

CODE YELLOW sounds the mass casualty alert at Lutheran General.

Parents seek Dist. 96 changes

Emotional outbursts and angry shouting came from parents in Buffalo Grove-Long Grove Dist. 96 Monday night after a petition was presented to the board of education asking for changes in the district's educational system.

More than 150 parents jammed the cafeteria of Kildeer School, Rt. 2, Long Grove, to speak for and against the district's individually guided educational system in which children learn at their own pace in an open classroom setting.

Parent Judy Borg, Long Grove, presented a petition signed by 1,199 residents asking the district to provide an alternative program which emphasizes structure and discipline.

"WE HOPE THE school board will take action that will allow not only the present system of open classriom, but to offer more structure to those children who can't handle the open structure," Mrs. Borg said.

The parents' complaints ranged from charges that music and physical education teachers are not provided for some kindergarten classes to requests that each student have his own text book to bring home without permission of the school.

Several parents asked the board to provide test scores to compare Dist. 96 with other school districts in the area.

"I want to see how the academic achievement of our schools measures up to the school districts around us," said one Buffalo Grove parent.

LOUD APPLAUSE followed the remarks of a junior at Stevenson High School who said she is "suffering" in high school because of the education system in Dist. 96.

"I was in Twin Groves and me and my fellow students from Twin Groves were way behind," said Kim Collins, 831 Westbourne, Buffalo Grove. "There was just no comparison between us and the structured classes." Twin Grove is the middle school in Dist. 96.

Several parents at Monday's meeting speak in favor of the IGE system and asked the board if it provides an alternative, it should not be at the expense of IGE.

"I find IGE to be a very exciting and stimulating program," said Art Greenberg, a parent. "This kind of system goes more toward the individual. We were never like that in a structured system."

5 years probation for Patty Hearst

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst was sentenced Monday to five years probation for two charges stemming from a 1974 crime spree.

Miss Hearst, 23, flanked by her two attorneys, stood and faced the judge to hear the sentence that could have been life in prison.

She had pleaded "no contest" April 18 to charges of assault with a deadly weapon and robbery while a member of the Symbionese Liberation Army. Nine other charges, including assault, robbery and kidnaping, were dismissed at the time of sentencing.

JUDGE E. TALBOT Callister sentenced her to five years probation on each of two counts with several conditions, including financial restitution to the owner of a sporting goods store she peppered with machine gun fire.

Other conditions were that she seek training or schooling and maintain a residence under the direction of the probation officer.

"I have been a criminal judge for nearly seven years," Judge E. Talbot Callister said. "During that time, I don't remember how many people I have sentenced, but it must be several thousand. None of those decisions has been more difficult than the one that faces me today."

He said he was convinced Miss Hearst would be in physical danger if she were to be jailed.

"SHE IS NOT A present or a future law enforcement risk," Callister said, adding that all law enforcement agencies involved in the case agreed that further confinement was not necessary.

Dressed in a long tan skirt and brown sweater, Miss Hearst sat quietly through the court proceeding Monday and arose to say only, "Yes, your honor," when asked if she was ready for sentencing.

Albert Johnson, who has defended Miss Hearst here, said he decided on the "no contest" plea because he was convinced she could not get a fair

Cop union chief arrested again for drunken driving

John Flood

John J. Flood, president of the Combined Counties Police Assn., again has been arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated and improper lane usage.

Flood, 36, of 407 Killarney, Mundelein, was driving northbound on Arlington Heights Road, just south of Checker Drive Saturday when his car was clocked by Buffalo Grove police speeding 43 miles per hour in a 35 mile-per-hour zone.

Patrolman Walter Grochowski reported that he pulled Flood's car over after he saw it traveling on an "unsure" path.

POLICE SAID THERE was a heavy odor of alcohol on Flood's breath as he "staggered" from his car about 4 a.m. He then was placed under arrest and brought back to the Buffalo Grove police station where he was charged with speeding, improper lane usage, drunken driving, refusing to take a breathalyzer test and battery.

Flood was charged with battery after he allegedly grabbed Sgt. Peter Lippert around the neck with his hands at the police station and said "Don't tell me what to do."

Police said Flood was uncooperative during arrest procedures and several times requested police not charge him with the drunken driving count.

Flood is scheduled to appear in the Arlington Heights branch of the Cook County Circuit Court June 21 at 11 a.m. He is free after posting a $1,000 bond Saturday.

FLOOD SAID MONDAY he would not comment on the charges on advice of his attorneys.

"All I can really say is that I'll go to court and stand trial on these (charges)," said Flood, a Cook County Sheriff's policeman on leave.

The CCPA president was arrested by Mundelein police Oct. 6 for drunken driving and improper lane usage after his car struck another car in a parking lot. Flood was placed in a municipal lockup after refusing to be fingerprinted or photographed.

Flood also was charged with leaving the scene of an accident in connection with the collision. All three charges were consolidated and are scheduled to be heard in the Waukegan branch of Lake County Circuit Court May 17.

The CCPA, the only organization of its kind in the Chicago area, was formed in 1969 by Flood, who left his job as sergeant for Cook County to devote full time to the union.

The organization has grown to more than 2,000 members and represents 50 chapters, including Wheeling, Des Plaines and Mount Prospect. Mundelein and Buffalo Grove are not members of the CCPA.

On flood-control project

District playing politics: Fabish

The Lake County Forest Preserve District is "trying to play politics with flood control," by threatening to withdraw from a three-party agreement which would allow construction of a retention basin west of Arlington Heights Road and south of Checker Road, Buffalo Grove Village Pres. Edward Fabish told the village board Monday.

Representatives of the Forest Preserve district told Fabish earlier Monday they would not proceed with condemnation of the proposed retention basin unless the Metropolitan Sanitary District, which had agreed to pay for the $1.5 million retention project, also would agree to pay another $600,000 for the additional 30 acres of land adjacent to the planned retention site to be used for recreation.

"WHAT THEY ARE doing — give me a chance to settle down I'm still hot — they are trying to play politics with flood control," Fabish told village board and the village plan commission which were meeting in a workshop section.

The district is being discriminatory against Buffalo Grove Lake County residents, Fabish told the board.

"I am going to send a letter to the U.S. attorney general asking him to investigate what are they (Forest Preserve District) spending federal funds on," Fabish said.

"There are a lot of people in Buffalo Grove who live in Lake County and they are being treated as second-class citizens," by the Forest Preserve District, Fabish said.

HIS REMARK that the Forest Preserve District might be discriminating against Buffalo Grove was prompted by a conversation he had with Glenn Miller of the Forest Preserve District, Fabish said. Miller told him the district considers Buffalo Grove to be a Cook County community.

"I said, 'I'm sorry we are Cook and Lake County.' We are being prejudiced by the Lake County Forest Preserve District, by the land barons in Long Grove," Fabish said.

The Forest Preserve District, in a 1973 agreement, committed itself to condemn the proposed retention site. In the same agreement the MSD agreed to pay for the land and Buffalo Grove agreed to maintain the retention area.

Campaign to back nursing home

A letter-writing campaign is being started by Lake County officials in their battle to save the Winchester House county nursing home.

County officials are urging residents to write to Illinois Senators Charles Percy and Adlai Stevenson III this week to demonstrate areawide support for the Winchester House.

A hot line has been established at 689-6338 so anyone interested in helping save the Winchester House can volunteer.

"WE ARE exhausting every alternative," Norman Geary, county board chairman, said. "If something isn't done to resolve the tehcnical problems HEW (U.S. Dept. of Housing, Education and Welfare) has imposed, we will have to close our nursing home and others in the state are in the same plight."

Janet Morrison, chairwoman of a county board committee for Winchester House, said repeated efforts to contact HEW Sec. Joseph A. Califano have been unsuccessful.

The HEW regulation that caused the financial plight at Winchester House says nursing homes must accept the state public aid payment as payment-in-full for a Medicaid patient.

THE RULE was intended to prevent nursing homes from billing a public aid patient's family, but it also prevents the county's 18 townships from supplementing the public aid payments.

The Illinois Dept. of Public Aid pays a maximum of $21.56 per day per patient, while costs at Winchester House are $31 per day.

The county paid $800,000 to subsidize the home in the last fiscal year, and deficits this fiscal year are expected to reach $1.36 million if no solution is found.

MRS. MORRISON, chairwoman of the county's finance committee, said she will recommend the county close or sell the home if no solution is found by early June.

An agreement reached among townships in McHenry County seemed to offer a solution, but an HEW interpretation obtained by Lake County said the McHenry agreement was illegal.

The McHenry townships had agreed to pay the county nursing home's deficit at the end of the year, based on the number of patient days from each township.

The HEW interpretation said that townships and counties were sub-units of state government and could not supplement the state payment.

LAKE COUNTY has enlisted the help of several other counties.

Winnebago, DuPage, Rock Island, Peoria, DeKalb, McLean, Madison and McHenry counties all have nursing homes in financial trouble and have banded together with Lake County.

A trip to Washington is in the planning stage, with officials from several of the counties. Lt. Gov. Dave O'Neal has also expressed interest in the trip, Geary said.

Lake County has contacted the Health Systems Agency for Kane, Lake and McHenry counties for support, and has received verbal support from the regional HEW office which regulates standards for nursing homes.

A federal court case filed by Lake County against the Illinois Dept. of Public Aid and HEW to change the regulation is pending, but Mrs. Morrison said a ruling may not be in time to save the nursing home.

Funds asked for bilingual library

A $150,000 grant to cover three more years of funding for a special bilingual library program serving Spanish-speaking residents in eight Northwest suburbs is being sought by program administrators.

Stephanie Ardito, field librarian for the program based in the Palatine Public Library, said the grant application has been sent to the Chicago Community Trust, a group of Chicago banks which provide money for a variety of community organizations and groups in Cook County.

An estimated 5,000 to 6,000 Spanish-speaking residents live in the Northwest suburbs.

MS. ARDITO SAID the grant application has been made to this group because the program cannot be renewed under the federal program which awarded the initial money to start the program.

The program began in March 1976 with a $34,355 first-year grant which was extended to include another $36,395 to fund the program through October.

The federal grant was administered under the Library Services and Construction Act and was awarded by the Illinois State Library Assn.

Ms Ardito said in addition to the $150,000, the program is seeking three additional persons to be paid for by the Chicago Community Trust. She said the group is scheduled to consider the grant at a meeting June 21.

If the committee fails to approve the grant, she said other foundations, such as the Ford Foundation, would be approached for funding.

TWO OF THE original eight Northwest suburban libraries in the program will drop out after October, Ms. Ardito said, while six new libraries, all in Lake County, will join the program.

Dropping out are Elk Grove Village and Barrington. Elk Grove Village will maintain a small collection of materials for Spnaish-speaking persons but does not plan to fund an administrator for the program. Remaining in the program are Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg Township, Palatine, and Indian Trails.

Joining the program will be North Chicago, Waukegan, the Ela Township area including Lake Zurich and Libertyville, and the Fremont library district including Mundelein and the Vernon Township Library,

Materials for the program including books, records, tapes and magazines for Spanish-speaking residents, are housed at the Palatine Library, 500 N. Benton St.

In addition, the program has sponsored special events such as Sunday afternoon films in Spanish.

Ms. Ardito said the program has been well accepted among Spanish-speaking residents.

"In the last six months we have seen many more people coming in," she said. She said the Sunday afternoon films have drawn audiences numbering from 80 to 130.

The program also has begun working with bilingual teachers in Northwest suburban schools, she said.

Psychic foretells death of Brach

by JOHN LAMPINEN

Irene Diamond is convinced that missing heiress Helen Voorhees Brach is dead, the victim of a rejected suitor.

Glenview Police Chief William Bartlett believes that theory is fine, but he would rather have some evidence to back it up.

Bartlett has been getting calls from psychics and astrologers like Mrs. Diamond since late March when news of Mrs. Brach's disappearance began making headlines.

"I NEVER KNEW there were so many in the area," he says. "They all call. The only thing is, none of them can tell me where Mrs. Brach is."

Mrs. Brach, 65, has not been seen since Feb. 21, when her houseman, Jack Matlick, who lives on the Brach family farm in Schaumburg Township, says he drove her to O'Hare Airport to catch a plane to Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

Mrs. Diamond, 54, of Hoffman Estates has been practicing astrology for several years. She is known locally for her campaigns for village president, in which she has run and lost — despite predictions of victory — under her real name, Irene Petke.

She got interested in the Brach case a few weeks ago and says she wants to do something about it because of the "intrigue."

"It can also give validity to astrology," she adds.

INITIALLY, SHE tried to "communicate" with Mrs. Brach and she received "several impressions," she says. Those "impressions" told her:

"Mrs. Brach may still be alive and kept hidden somewhere against her will. He (her captor) made advances to her, and she resisted, and that made him mad."

However, to pin down her location and get more details of what happened, Mrs. Diamond says she must get inside the Brach mansion in Glenview so she can "reenact what happened."

Ten days ago, Mrs. Diamond was going to go to Glenview, represent herself as an old family friend and try to get into the house.

Some friends warned her against that, however, and then Mrs. Diamond noticed that there was a full moon last Tuesday.

"ERRATIC THINGS do come with the full moon, and there was no need to take a chance," she says, so she delayed her expedition.

Late last week, she picked up the expedition again and went out to the 100-acre Schaumburg farm where Matlick and his family live. She is a licensed real estate salesman, and she asked if the farm was for sale. She was told that it was not, that it never would be and that she could not enter.

Sunday night, she had a friend from Des Plaines drive her to the house in Glenview. A gray-haired woman in a white uniform and a sweater met her at the door.

"I was supposed to be a guest for the weekend with Helen Brach," Mrs. Diamond said.

THE WOMAN looked incredulous.

"Don't you read the papers?" she demanded.

"About what?" Mrs. Diamond asked.

Again, she was unable to get in. She remains undaunted. She phoned Bartlett Monday to pass along her information and to try to get some from him to help her investigation.

Meanwhile, the past couple of days have convinced Mrs. Diamond that Mrs. Brach is no longer alive. She has been receiving "death signs" the past three days, she says, and it could mean that Mrs. Brach has been killed by her captor.

SHE SAYS SHE even knows the name of Mrs. Brach's killer. He is a man Mrs Diamond describes as "violent and obsessed" with "sadistic tendencies" and the ability to be a "terrific actor."

She told Bartlett of her suspect; he told her he has to go on evidence.

And so far, Bartlett says, there isn't much of that. Asked about the status of the case, he replied: "quo."

The department's investigation has included a search of the Schaumburg farm both by foot and by helicopter.

"We don't have any evidence of one kind or another," Bartlett says.

While a number of psychics and astrologers have called, he says he generally is a "skeptic" about their accuracy. A couple have asked to hold something belonging to Mrs. Brach to help them receive "vibrations," and Bartlett says police have complied with the request.

Crossing guard will go to court May 23

by SCOTT FOSDICK

Crossing guard Fran Bernstein, who has accused a Maine Township man of assault by attempting to run her down while she was helping children cross the street, will take her case to court May 23.

The case is scheduled to be heard before Judge Simon Porter in the Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Mrs. Bernstein, an East Maine Dist. 63 crossing guard, said she was helping several children cross Church Street at the corner of Bumble Bee Drive one morning last month when Lee Snyder, 9148 Church St., Des Plaines, refused to honor her stop sign and almost ran her down.

"HE PUT his foot on the gas and came right at me..I jumped out of the way," Mrs. Bernstein said. "He could have hit me if I'd fallen down."

The incident started, Mrs. Bernstein said, with Snyder honking his horn several times as she was helping a large group of children cross the street.

Mrs. Bernstein said Snyder yelled at her to get out of the way because he was "late for work." When she refused, she said he shouted, " 'I'm not waiting for those kids to get across!' "

WHEN SHE refused to move, she said he drove straight toward her. She got out of the way quickly. No one was hurt because all of the smaller children were already across, and a group of older children were waiting at the curb, watching the argument.

An attempt by The Herald to talk to Snyder Monday was unsuccessful.

This is the second time this year that a motorist has been accused of refusing to stop for a crossing guard in the Northwest suburbs. Linda McElderry, 19, of Elk Grove Village, March 24 was found guilty of disobeying an Elk Grove Village crossing guard's order to stop. She will be sentenced May 26.

MRS. BERNSTEIN said most crossing guards have learned to live with discourteous drivers.

"I've had people who have run my stop sign. Or they'll give me the finger, or yell at me. It happens to all the crossing guards," she said. "We're out there because we want to help the children. It's sad, it really is."

Mrs. Bernstein is being represented by Dist. 63 attorney, Jerome Robbins.

More than airline involved in crash suits

by TONI GINNETTI

Second of two parts

The airlines are generally blamed for air accidents, except in court. Today Herald reporters write about the airline industry's efforts to train employes for emergencies and the disaster plans used by area hospitals in case of an aviation disaster.

To the layman who uses air transportation, a plane crash would seem the obvious fault of an airline.

The years that it takes to resolve wrongful death claims filed in the wake of commercial air disasters are the best proof of the fallacy of that reasoning.

While an airline typically is the prime defendant named, manufacturers of aircraft, fuel manufacturers, even the U.S. government which employs air traffic controllers through the Federal Aviation Administration, commonly are named as defendants.

DOMESTIC AIR CRASH litigation generally is filed in federal court because of the cross-state residency of victims and airline headquarters. In Cook County, however, a number of cases are filed in the state circuit court because many airlines have offices in Chicago.

THERE ARE generally two steps to resolving airline litigation. The establishment of liability for an accident must first be determined, then individual damage claims are settled.

"Early on the liability is usually resolved, and then the cases will lie around for years resolving damages," according to noted personal injury attorney Philip H. Coorby. "It's not the cast itself that's taking so long, it's the resolution of the damages."

Liability "is the major hurdle," according to Wallace E. Maloney, an expert in air litigation who represents airlines. If an airline is "obviously liable" for a mishap, "there is no sense in prolonging it," Maloney said. "It's a matter of 'get out the check book.' "

IN THE 1968 CRASH of a North Central Airlines converted turbo-prop jet at O'Hare Airport, lawsuits named four parties as defendants. They included the airline; General Motors Corp., which converted the craft; Pacific Airmotive Corp., a subcontractor of GM; and General Dynamics Corp., the craft's original builder.

Only the airline was found liable.

Hospitals set for disaster at O'Hare

by KURT BAER

Resurrection Hospital, on Chicago's Far Northwest Side, sits in the middle of a "disaster triangle."

To the north, Chicago and North Western Ry. trains rumble night and day; to the south stretches the Kennedy Expressway and the Chicago Transit Authority's Jefferson Park train line; and in the west, the world's busiest airport, O'Hare Field, buzzes with take-offs and landings.

Resurrection is O'Hare's hospital, and twice it has had to implement disaster plans because of crashes at the airport.

• Dec. 27, 1968, a North Central Airlines twin-engine turboprop plane crashed into a Braniff International Airlines hangar while attempting to land in a heavy fog. Twenty-seven of the 45 persons on board the plane were killed.

• Dec. 20, 1972, a North Central Airlines DC-9 collided with a Delta Airlines Convair 880 on the runway, killing 10 of the passengers on the North Central jet.

IN BOTH INSTANCES, the dead and the injured were brought to Resurrection's door, the hospital closest to O'Hare.

A telephone call from police and fire officials initially alerts the hospital. "A Code Zero is sounded and all the supervisors, nurses and doctors available respond to the emergency room," says Sister Donna Marie, Resurrection's assistant director of nursing.

Injuries are assessed and assigned priority for treatment according to a system known as "Triage." Persons needing immediate life-saving treatment are cared for first, followed by those who require immediate surgery, X-ray, minimal treatment and observation, treatment and release.

EVERY HOSPITAL is required to have a disaster plan and to practice it, says John Wilke, chairman of the mass casualty committee at Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge.

"If your plan is not practiced and not put to use, it might as well sit on the shelf," says Wilke. "It's easy to think of disaster planning as just another committee. But when the time actually comes, that's when the benefits are reaped."

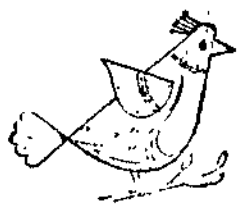

Lutheran General, as well as Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines, and Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, are back-up hospitals for Resurrection in airport injury cases. Four members of the North Central crew injured in the 1973 crash were brought to Lutheran General for treatment.

CODE YELLOW sounds the mass casualty alert at Lutheran General.

Could be dry summer for pools

Unless Elk Grove Village officials relax their stand on water conservation, two park district and some 700 residential swimming pools will remain empty this summer.

"As the village rules stand, it would take all summer to fill a pool," says James Clementi, superintendent of the village water and sewer department.

An ordinance that went into effect this month restricts pool filling to only four hours once each week.

AN AVERAGE backyard pool uses about 19,000 gallons of water for the first filling. A garden hose is capable of pumping about 1,000 gallons of water an hour.

Clementi said apartment complex pools are usually four or five times as big.

"At that rate it's a summer-long job," Clementi said.

Clementi said he has received numerous complaints about the rules from residents and complex managers.

IN A RECOMMENDATION to Village Mgr. Charles Willis and the village board, Clementi said "people who have a large investment in pools

Restaurant water rule expected

At the urging of high school students, Elk Grove Village officials are expected Tuesday to adopt a resolution curtailing restaurants from serving water except when customers request it.

Mount Prospect and Schaumburg adopted similar resolutions this year.

Several of the village's 13 restaurants voluntarily have adopted the conservation program.

"We serve water only when it is requested," said Anita Cherio, owner of Cherio's Pizza, 122 Turner Ave.

"WE LIVE IN ELK Grove Village and are as concerned about protecting our water supply as its officials are," she said.

5 years probation for Patty Hearst

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst was sentenced Monday to five years probation for two charges stemming from a 1974 crime spree.

Miss Hearst, 23, flanked by her two attorneys, stood and faced the judge to hear the sentence that could have been life in prison.

She had pleaded "no contest" April 18 to charges of assault with a deadly weapon and robbery while a member of the Symbionese Liberation Army. Nine other charges, including assault, robbery and kidnaping, were dismissed at the time of sentencing.

JUDGE E. TALBOT Callister sentenced her to five years probation on each of two counts with several conditions, including financial restitution to the owner of a sporting goods store she peppered with machine gun fire.

Other conditions were that she seek training or schooling and maintain a residence under the direction of the probation officer.

"I have been a criminal judge for nearly seven years," Judge E. Talbot Callister said. "During that time, I don't remember how many people I have sentenced, but it must be several thousand. None of those decisions has been more difficult than the one that faces me today."

He said he was convinced Miss Hearst would be in physical danger if she were to be jailed.

"SHE IS NOT A present or a future law enforcement risk," Callister said, adding that all law enforcement agencies involved in the case agreed that further confinement was not necessary.

Dressed in a long tan skirt and brown sweater, Miss Hearst sat quietly through the court proceeding Monday and arose to say only, "Yes, your honor," when asked if she was ready for sentencing.

Albert Johnson, who has defended Miss Hearst here, said he decided on the "no contest" plea because he was convinced she could not get a fair

Cop union chief arrested again for drunken driving

John Flood

John J. Flood, president of the Combined Counties Police Assn., again has been arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated and improper lane usage.

Flood, 36, of 407 Killarney, Mundelein, was driving northbound on Arlington Heights Road, just south of Checker Drive Saturday when his car was clocked by Buffalo Grove police speeding 43 miles per hour in a 35 mile-per-hour zone.

Patrolman Walter Grochowski reported that he pulled Flood's car over after he saw it traveling on an "unsure" path.

POLICE SAID THERE was a heavy odor of alcohol on Flood's breath as he "staggered" from his car about 4 a.m. He then was placed under arrest and brought back to the Buffalo Grove police station where he was charged with speeding, improper lane usage, drunken driving, refusing to take a breathalyzer test and battery.

Flood was charged with battery after he allegedly grabbed Sgt. Peter Lippert around the neck with his hands at the police station and said "Don't tell me what to do."

Police said Flood was uncooperative during arrest procedures and several times requested police not charge him with the drunken driving count.

Flood is scheduled to appear in the Arlington Heights branch of the Cook County Circuit Court June 21 at 11 a.m. He is free after posting a $1,000 bond Saturday.

FLOOD SAID MONDAY he would not comment on the charges on advice of his attorneys.

"All I can really say is that I'll go to court and stand trial on these (charges)," said Flood, a Cook County Sheriff's policeman on leave.

The CCPA president was arrested by Mundelein police Oct. 6 for drunken driving and improper lane usage after his car struck another car in a parking lot. Flood was placed in a municipal lockup after refusing to be fingerprinted or photographed.

Flood also was charged with leaving the scene of an accident in connection with the collision. All three charges were consolidated and are scheduled to be heard in the Waukegan branch of Lake County Circuit Court May 17.

The CCPA, the only organization of its kind in the Chicago area, was formed in 1969 by Flood, who left his job as sergeant for Cook County to devote full time to the union.

The organization has grown to more than 2,000 members and represents 50 chapters, including Wheeling, Des Plaines and Mount Prospect. Mundelein and Buffalo Grove are not members of the CCPA.

Libraries to share loss in tax funds

The Elk Grove Village Library will share in the loss of expected revenue if the state legislature passes a tax relief proposal for village residents living in Schaumburg Township.

The expected loss of revenue to the village library would come about because of an amendment State Rep. Eugenia Chapman-D-Arlington Heights, has made to her bill that would end taxation of 864 homeowners in the Winston Grove subdivision in Elk Grove Village by the Schaumburg Township Library.

THAT AMENDMENT also would reduce the $17,000-$27,000 loss Schaumburg Township Library has expected if the bill is passed. Instead both libraries would stand to lose $8,500-$13,500 annually.

Homeowners in the subdivision west of Ill. Rte. 53 have been paying taxes both to the township and to the village library.

Chapman's bill originally would have meant that the township library would have lost all its tax revenue from that area.

She amended that legislation on the suggestion of township officials, however, to add that Elk Grove Village must split the revenue raised in that area by its library tax with Schaumburg Township.

"I THINK THIS was an excellent suggestion," she said Monday. "It was a good way of handling it that was creative and was fair to either side."

There was "no opposition at all" before the bill was passed out of committee, Chapman said, and she said the General Assembly should approve it within the next two weeks.

Library officials in Schaumburg Township previously had expressed concern that the original proposal would put the library, which has been operating under a tight budget, "in an awkward situation" financially.

Trustee Deborah Miller, who has been investigating the matter for the township library board said Monday she is pleased with the amendment.

"THE MAIN CRITERIA was that these people wouldn't have to pay two taxes. What's really important is that it has been worked out," she said. "I'm glad we're finally getting some kind of resolution to these people who don't have to pay a double tax."

Officials of the Elk Grove library, however, were not sure what impact the amendment wuld have.

Librarian Janet Steiner said she has "no idea" how much the village library stands to lose and referred questions to Library Board Pres. Robert Fleming, who she said is handling the matter. Fleming said he does not know how the bill would affect the library.

HOWEVER, Trustee Mary Wilber, who lives in the Winston Grove area, said there has been concern on the library board that it also would have to split its tax receipts on industrial land within the village that also lies in Addison Township in DuPage County.

Considerably more revenue is generated there because of the industrial base, she said, and a split in that revenue "would seriously hurt" the library. However, she added, it appears the bill would not affect that area.

Ms. Steiner said library officials are still studying the potential "repercussions from the bill that no one had really given thought to."

BUT MRS. WILBER gave limited support to the legislation.

"If this is the only way that people in this area can be spared," she said, "Then I'm in favor of it."

In general, the bill would mean a savings of 15 cents for every $100 in assessed valuation for homeowners in Winston Grove. In other parts of Schaumburg Township or Elk Grove Village, the owner of a house assessed at $10,000 pays $15 in library operating taxes. Currently, in Winston Grove, the same house is taxed for $30. Winston Grove residents, however, do not receive twice the services. Both the township and village libraries are part of the North Suburban Library System, which allows members of one library to use another.

Woman seeks missing heiress

by JOHN LAMPINEN

Irene Diamond is convinced that missing heiress Helen Voorhees Brach is dead, the victim of a rejected suitor.

Glenview Police Chief William Bartlett believes that theory is fine, but he would rather have some evidence to back it up.

Bartlett has been getting calls from psychics and astrologers like Mrs. Diamond since late March when news of Mrs. Brach's disappearance began making headlines.

"I NEVER KNEW there were so many in the area," he says. "They all call. The only thing is, none of them can tell me where Mrs. Brach is."

Mrs. Brach, 65, has not been seen since Feb. 21, when her houseman, Jack Matlick, who lives on the Brach family farm in Schaumburg Township, says he drove her to O'Hare Airport to catch a plane to Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

Mrs. Diamond, 54, of Hoffman Estates has been practicing astrology for several years. She is known locally for her campaigns for village president, in which she has run and lost — despite predictions of victory — under her real name, Irene Petke.

She got interested in the Brach case a few weeks ago and says she wants to do something about it because of the "intrigue."

"It can also give validity to astrology," she adds.

INITIALLY, SHE tried to "communicate" with Mrs. Brach and she received "several impressions," she says. Those "impressions" told her:

"Mrs. Brach may still be alive and kept hidden somewhere against her will. He (her captor) made advances to her, and she resisted, and that made him mad."

However, to pin down her location and get more details of what happened, Mrs. Diamond says she must get inside the Brach mansion in Glenview so she can "reenact what happened."

Ten days ago, Mrs. Diamond was going to go to Glenview, represent herself as an old family friend and try to get into the house.

Some friends warned her against that, however, and then Mrs. Diamond noticed that there was a full moon last Tuesday.

"ERRATIC THINGS do come with the full moon, and there was no need to take a chance," she says, so she delayed her expedition.

Late last week, she picked up the expedition again and went out to the 100-acre Schaumburg farm where Matlick and his family live. She is a licensed real estate salesman, and she asked if the farm was for sale. She was told that it was not, that it never would be and that she could not enter.

Sunday night, she had a friend from Des Plaines drive her to the house in Glenview. A gray-haired woman in a white uniform and a sweater met her at the door.

"I was supposed to be a guest for the weekend with Helen Brach," Mrs. Diamond said.

THE WOMAN looked incredulous.

"Don't you read the papers?" she demanded.

"About what?" Mrs. Diamond asked.

Again, she was unable to get in. She remains undaunted. She phoned Bartlett Monday to pass along her information and to try to get some from him to help her investigation.

Meanwhile, the past couple of days have convinced Mrs. Diamond that Mrs. Brach is no longer alive. She has been receiving "death signs" the past three days, she says, and it could mean that Mrs. Brach has been killed by her captor.

SHE SAYS SHE even knows the name of Mrs. Brach's killer. He is a man Mrs. Diamond describes as "violent and obsessed" with "sadistic tendencies" and the ability to be a "terrific actor."

She told Bartlett of her suspect; he told her he has to go on evidence.

And so far, Bartlett says, there isn't much of that. Asked about the status of the case, he replied: "quo."

$150,000 grant asked for bilingual library

A $150,000 grant to cover three more years of funding for a special bilingual library program serving Spanish-speaking residents in eight Northwest suburbs is being sought by program administrators.

Stephanie Ardito, field librarian for the program based in the Palatine Public Library, said the grant application has been sent to the Chicago Community Trust, a group of Chicago banks which provide money for a variety of community organizations and groups in Cook County.

An estimated 5,000 to 6,000 Spanish-speaking residents live in the Northwest suburbs.

MS. ARDITO SAID the grant application has been made to this group because the program cannot be renewed under the federal program which awarded the initial money to start the program.

The program began in March 1976 with a $34,355 first-year grant which was extended to include another $36,395 to fund the program through October.

The federal grant was administered under the Library Services and Construction Act and was awarded by the Illinois State Library Assn.

Ms. Ardito said in addition to the $150,000, the program is seeking three additional persons to be paid for by the Chicago Community Trust. She said the group is scheduled to consider the grant at a meeting June 21.

If the committee fails to approve the grant, she said other foundations, such as the Ford Foundation, would be approached for funding.

TWO OF THE original eight Northwest suburban libraries in the program will drop out after October, Ms. Ardito said, while six new libraries, all in Lake County, will join the program.

Dropping out are Elk Grove Village and Barrington. Elk Grove Village will maintain a small collection of materials for Spnaish-speaking persons but does not plan to fund an administrator for the program. Remaining in the program are Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg Township, Palatine, and Indian Trails.

Joining the program will be North Chicago, Waukegan, the Ela Township area including Lake Zurich and Libertyville, and the Fremont library district including Mundelein and the Vernon Township Library.

Materials for the program including books, records, tapes and magazines for Spanish-speaking residents, are housed at the Palatine Library, 500 N. Benton St.

In addition, the program has sponsored special events such as Sunday afternoon films in Spanish.

Ms. Ardito said the program has been well accepted among Spanish-speaking residents.

"In the last six months we have seen many more people coming in," she said. She said the Sunday afternoon films have drawn audiences numbering from 80 to 130.

The program also has begun working with bilingual teachers in Northwest suburban schools, she said.

in the apartment complexes and residential area should be allowed to fill pools even though our ordinance prohibits it, except for certain limited periods of time."

He asked village officials to consider allowing residents, the park district, apartment complexes and condominium associations to obtain a special permit to allow the first fill.

Clementi says he's applied the same water use rule to the park district as he has to the residential areas, but park officials say they should receive special consideration.

JACK CLAES, director of parks and recreation, said he is aware of the restriction but is assuming the park district will receive special consideration.

Claes said he is "talking to city officials about the problem but I am confident the village will not allow the district pools to remain empty since they serve so many village residents.

"If necessary, the district could fill in several of those four hour periods, but it would take almost as long as it would for a resident to do it with a garden hose," Claes said. He added although the district pumps water at about four times the rate a homeowner does, the pool is bigger and takes longer to fill.

Village may limit restaurant water

Steak Joynt, Algonquin Road and Ill. Rte. 83, Elk Grove Township, said the restaurant changed its practice several months ago when neighboring Mount Prospect restaurants were asked to do so by village officia s.

"We are trying to do our part. It has not at all betn an inconvenience to our customers," he said

MAGEE SAID HE cannot determine if the conservation measure has any substantial impact on water consumption. "We still get a big bill but maybe that's because the water rates are higher," he said.

The resolution was submitted to the village board by Elk Grove Village School students involved in a public service work program.

Students Steven La Forge and Keith Peterson will present the resolution at the village board meeting at 8 p.m. in village hall, 901 Wellington Ave.

More than airline involved in crash suits

by TONI GINNETTI

Second of two parts

The airlines are generally blamed for air accidents, except in court. Today Herald reporters write about the airline industry's efforts to train employes for emergencies and the disaster plans used by area hospitals in case of an aviation disaster.

To the layman who uses air transportation, a plane crash would seem the obvious fault of an airline.

The years that it takes to resolve wrongful death claims filed in the wake of commercial air disasters are the best proof of the fallacy of that reasoning.

While an airline typically is the prime defendant named, manufacturers of aircraft, fuel manufacturers, even the U.S. government which employs air traffic controllers through the Federal Aviation Administration, commonly are named as defendants.

DOMESTIC AIR CRASH litigation generally is filed in federal court because of the cross-state residency of victims and airline headquarters. In Cook County, however, a number of cases are filed in the state circuit court because many airlines have offices in Chicago.

THERE ARE generally two steps to resolving airline litigation. The establishment of liability for an accident must first be determined, then individual damage claims are settled.

"Early on the liability is usually resolved, and then the cases will lie around for years resolving damages," according to noted personal injury attorney Philip H. Coorby. "It's not the cast itself that's taking so long, it's the resolution of the damages."

Liability "is the major hurdle," according to Wallace E. Maloney, an expert in air litigation who represents airlines. If an airline is "obviously liable" for a mishap, "there is no sense in prolonging it," Maloney said. "It's a matter of 'get out the check book.' "

IN THE 1968 CRASH of a North Central Airlines converted turbo-prop jet at O'Hare Airport, lawsuits named four parties as defendants. They included the airline; General Motors Corp., which converted the craft; Pacific Airmotive Corp., a subcontractor of GM; and General Dynamics Corp., the craft's original builder.

Only the airline was found liable.

Some 95 per cent of all suits are settled out of court, but attorneys will disagree on the "psychology" of delaying settlements.

Hospitals set for disaster at O'Hare

by KURT BAER

Resurrection Hospital, on Chicago's Far Northwest Side, sits in the middle of a "disaster triangle."

To the north, Chicago and North Western Ry. trains rumble night and day; to the south stretches the Kennedy Expressway and the Chicago Transit Authority's Jefferson Park train line; and in the west, the world's busiest airport, O'Hare Field, buzzes with take-offs and landings.

Resurrection is O'Hare's hospital, and twice it has had to implement disaster plans because of crashes at the airport.

• Dec. 27, 1968, a North Central Airlines twin-engine turboprop plane crashed into a Braniff International Airlines hangar while attempting to land in a heavy fog. Twenty-seven of the 45 persons on board the plane were killed.

• Dec. 20, 1972, a North Central Airlines DC-9 collided with a Delta Airlines Convair 880 on the runway, killing 10 of the passengers on the North Central jet.

IN BOTH INSTANCES, the dead and the injured were brought to Resurrection's door, the hospital closest to O'Hare.

A telephone call from police and fire officials initially alerts the hospital. "A Code Zero is sounded and all the supervisors, nurses and doctors available respond to the emergency room," says Sister Donna Marie, Resurrection's assistant director of nursing.

Injuries are assessed and assigned priority for treatment according to a system known as "Triage." Persons needing immediate life-saving treatment are cared for first, followed by those who require immediate surgery, X-ray, minimal treatment and observation, treatment and release.

EVERY HOSPITAL is required to have a disaster plan and to practice it, says John Wilke, chairman of the mass casualty committee at Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge.

"If your plan is not practiced and not put to use, it might as well sit on the shelf," says Wilke. "It's easy to think of disaster planning as just another committee. But when the time actually comes, that's when the benefits are reaped."

Lutheran General, as well as Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines, and Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, are back-up hospitals for Resurrection in airport injury cases. Four members of the North Central crew injured in the 1973 crash were brought to Lutheran General for treatment.

CODE YELLOW sounds the mass casualty alert at Lutheran General.

"I NEVER KNEW there were so many in the area," he says. "They all call. The only thing is, none of them can tell me where Mrs. Brach is."

Mrs. Brach, 65, has not been seen since Feb. 21, when her houseman, Jack Matlick, who lives on the Brach family farm in Schaumburg Township, says he drove her to O'Hare Airport to catch a plane to Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

Mrs. Diamond, 54, of Hoffman Estates has been practicing astrology for several years. She is known locally for her campaigns for village president, in which she has run and lost — despite predictions of victory — under her real name, Irene Petke.

She got interested in the Brach case a few weeks ago and says she wants to do something about it because of the "intrigue."

"It can also give validity to astrology," she adds.

INITIALLY, SHE tried to "communicate" with Mrs. Brach and she received "several impressions," she says. Those "impressions" told her:

"Mrs. Brach may still be alive and kept hidden somewhere against her will. He (her captor) made advances to her, and she resisted, and that made him mad."

However, to pin down her location and get more details of what happened, Mrs. Diamond says she must get inside the Brach mansion in Glenview so she can "reenact what happened."

Ten days ago, Mrs. Diamond was going to go to Glenview, represent herself as an old family friend and try to get into the house.

Some friends warned her against that, however, and then Mrs. Diamond noticed that there was a full moon last Tuesday.

"ERRATIC THINGS do come with the full moon, and there was no need

5 years probation for Patty Hearst

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst was sentenced Monday to five years probation for two charges stemming from a 1974 crime spree.

Miss Hearst, 23, flanked by her two attorneys, stood and faced the judge to hear the sentence that could have been life in prison.

She had pleaded "no contest" April 18 to charges of assault with a deadly weapon and robbery while a member of the Symbionese Liberation Army. Nine other charges, including assault, robbery and kidnaping, were dismissed at the time of sentencing.

JUDGE E. TALBOT Callister sentenced her to five years probation on each of two counts with several conditions, including financial restitution to the owner of a sporting goods store she peppered with machine gun fire.

Other conditions were that she seek training or schooling and maintain a residence under the direction of the probation officer.

"I have been a criminal judge for nearly seven years," Judge E. Talbot Callister said. "During that time, I don't remember how many people I have sentenced, but it must be several thousand. None of those decisions has been more difficult than the one that faces me today."

He said he was convinced Miss Hearst would be in physical danger if she were to be jailed.

"SHE IS NOT A present or a future law enforcement risk," Callister said, adding that all law enforcement agencies involved in the case agreed that further confinement was not necessary.

Dressed in a long tan skirt and brown sweater, Miss Hearst sat quietly through the court proceeding Monday and arose to say only, "Yes, your honor," when asked if she was ready for sentencing.

Albert Johnson, who has defended Miss Hearst here, said he decided on the "no contest" plea because he was convinced she could not get a fair

Cop union chief arrested again for drunken driving

John Flood

John J. Flood, president of the Combined Counties Police Assn., again has been arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated and improper lane usage.

Flood, 36, of 407 Killarney, Mundelein, was driving northbound on Arlington Heights Road, just south of Checker Drive Saturday when his car was clocked by Buffalo Grove police speeding 43 miles per hour in a 35 mile-per-hour zone.

Patrolman Walter Grochowski reported that he pulled Flood's car over after he saw it traveling on an "unsure" path.

POLICE SAID THERE was a heavy odor of alcohol on Flood's breath as he "staggered" from his car about 4 a.m. He then was placed under arrest and brought back to the Buffalo Grove police station where he was charged with speeding, improper lane usage, drunken driving, refusing to take a breathalyzer test and battery.

Flood was charged with battery after he allegedly grabbed Sgt. Peter Lippert around the neck with his hands at the police station and said "Don't tell me what to do."

Police said Flood was uncooperative during arrest procedures and several times requested police not charge him with the drunken driving count.

Flood is scheduled to appear in the Arlington Heights branch of the Cook County Circuit Court June 21 at 11 a.m. He is free after posting a $1,000 bond Saturday.

FLOOD SAID MONDAY he would not comment on the charges on advice of his attorneys.

"All I can really say is that I'll go to court and stand trial on these (charges)," said Flood, a Cook County Sheriff's policeman on leave.

The CCPA president was arrested by Mundelein police Oct. 6 for drunken driving and improper lane usage after his car struck another car in a parking lot. Flood was placed in a municipal lockup after refusing to be fingerprinted or photographed.

Flood also was charged with leaving the scene of an accident in connection with the collision. All three charges were consolidated and are scheduled to be heard in the Waukegan branch of Lake County Circuit Court May 17.

The CCPA, the only organization of its kind in the Chicago area, was formed in 1969 by Flood, who left his job as sergeant for Cook County to devote full time to the union.

The organization has grown to more than 2,000 members and represents 50 chapters, including Wheeling, Des Plaines and Mount Prospect. Mundelein and Buffalo Grove are not members of the CCPA.

Libraries to share loss in tax funds

The Elk Grove Village Library will share in the loss of expected revenue if the state legislature passes a tax relief proposal for village residents living in Schaumburg Township.

The expected loss of revenue to the village library would come about because of an amendment State Rep. Eugenia Chapman-D-Arlington Heights, has made to her bill that would end taxation of 864 homeowners in the Winston Grove subdivision in Elk Grove Village by the Schaumburg Township Library.

THAT AMENDMENT also would reduce the $17,000-$27,000 loss Schaumburg Township Library has expected if the bill is passed. Instead both libraries would stand to lose $8,500-$13,500 annually.

Homeowners in the subdivision west of Ill. Rte. 53 have been paying taxes both to the township and to the village library.

Chapman's bill originally would have meant that the township library would have lost all its tax revenue from that area.

She amended that legislation on the suggestion of township officials, however, to add that Elk Grove Village must split the revenue raised in that area by its library tax with Schaumburg Township.

"I THINK THIS was an excellent suggestion," she said Monday. "It was a good way of handling it that was creative and was fair to either side."

There was "no opposition at all" before the bill was passed out of committee, Chapman said, and she said the General Assembly should approve it within the next two weeks.

Library officials in Schaumburg Township previously had expressed concern that the original proposal would put the library, which has been operating under a tight budget, "in an awkward situation" financially.

Trustee Deborah Miller, who has been investigating the matter for the township library board said Monday she is pleased with the amendment.

"THE MAIN CRITERIA was that these people wouldn't have to pay two taxes. What's really important is that it has been worked out," she said. "I'm glad we're finally getting some kind of resolution to these people who don't have to pay a double tax."

Officials of the Elk Grove library, however, were not sure what impact the amendment wuld have.

Librarian Janet Steiner said she has "no idea" how much the village library stands to lose and referred questions to Library Board Pres. Robert Fleming, who she said is handling the matter. Fleming said he does not know how the bill would affect the library.

HOWEVER, Trustee Mary Wilber, who lives in the Winston Grove area, said there has been concern on the library board that it also would have to split its tax receipts on industrial land within the village that also lies in Addison Township in DuPage County.

Considerably more revenue is generated there because of the industrial base, she said, and a split in that revenue "would seriously hurt" the library. However, she added, it appears the bill would not affect that area.

Ms. Steiner said library officials are still studying the potential "repercussions from the bill that no one had really given thought to."

BUT MRS. WILBER gave limited support to the legislation.

"If this is the only way that people in this area can be spared," she said, "Then I'm in favor of it."

In general, the bill would mean a savings of 15 cents for every $100 in assessed valuation for homeowners in Winston Grove. In other parts of Schaumburg Township or Elk Grove Village, the owner of a house assessed at $10,000 pays $15 in library operating taxes. Currently, in Winston Grove, the same house is taxed for $30. Winston Grove residents, however, do not receive twice the services. Both the township and village libraries are part of the North Suburban Library System, which allows members of one library to use another.

Businessman steers to van pooling

by PAT GERLACH

Imagine starting a work day by strolling down the front walk to a luxury van waiting to take you to the door of your office building or plant.

Enroute you can read the morning paper, sip coffee or catch an extra 40 winks. Or you might prefer to just sit back in the comfortable airplane-type seat and listen to soothing music on stereo headsets in the vehicle, completely soundproofed with wall and ceiling carpet.

The idea is not at all far-fetched, say a group of suburban business leaders seeking Schaumburg and Rolling Meadows village and community support for the idea.

THE DRIVING force behind the local van pooling effort is Robert Winslow, managing director of IDC Real Estate, Schaumburg.

Wislow said he believes a joint van pooling program established by businesses in Schaumburg's Woodfield Shopping Center area "would provide more than enough riders to be successful."

He wants to interest Schaumburg businesses including Motorla, Union Oil, Addressograph-Multigraph, the Illinois Dept. of Transportation, International Harvester, Mobile Oil and the Woodfield Office Assn. in the proposed program.

And Wislow, said he hopes Rolling Meadows' major businesses like Gould, Inc., Western Electric and Chemplex will get on the bandwagon.

A recent van pooling interest survey done at Rockwell International's Admiral-Schaumburg Division, showed 47 of 237 workers polled indicated an interest in the program.

WISLOW IS awaiting the results of similar research being done at other large firms in the Schaumburg-Rolling Meadows area.

His proposed program would have employes from one or more local companies use a 12-passenger van for daily commuting.

Wislow has calculated fares of about $20 per month for a daily round trip of 20 miles to $30 per month for a round trip of 70 miles.

He said he believes potential advantages of the program to both users and the general public will include:

- Reduced energy consumption;
- Reduced risk and tension of commuting;
- Reduced congestion on streets and highways;
- Reduced air and noise pollution;
- Reduced parking problems;
- Reduced cost to the employes.

"In fact, it seems to me that there is a strong possibility of eliminating one car in some families through use of the van program," Wislow said.

ROBERT BRAWLEY, Motorola's facilities director, and Russell Larson, a Union Oil vice president, agree.

Both Brawley and Larson have been seeking mass transportation programs for the Schaumburg area.

"I think this is very reasonable, in fact, I'm optimistic in thinking it's just about here," Larson said.

Brawley favors an immediate "pilot program so we are no longer speculating but have some actual facts and figures."

SUCCESSFUL van pooling programs are operating in Los Angeles, Calif., St. Paul, Minn., and Houston, Tex.

Wislow said the Urban Mass Transportation Administration favors the program and has established a grant program to help purchase vans and set up systems. Recent UMTA grants went to Knoxville, Tenn. with $900,000, Marin, Calif., with $684,000 and $520,000 to the Norfolk, Va. area.

But Wislow and other local businessmen said they believe the van pooling service is vital to the Schaumburg area now and they do not favor waiting up to 18 months for approval of a government grant. They said they believe companies participating in the program should help buy the vans.

Wislow and Chrysler Corp., an active nationwide van pooling supporter, is willing to help with financing and Woodfield Bank has "a strong interest" in the local program.

"I think eventually we might want to go out for some federal money because they also have 'abort' funding in case a program doesn't work out," Wislow said.

HE SAID municipal support from Schaumburg and Rolling Meadows may be necessary to complete grant applications "but we don't know yet and won't make those inquiries until we know for sure there is business interest in the program."

But Wislow said he and other business leaders are "hopeful" Rolling Meadows and Schaumburg officials will support the van pooling effort..

"We intend to go to the municipal people just as soon as we get the business surveys back and we hope other companies that haven't yet heard about the program will be in touch with us if they are interested,"

3 boys convicted under vandal law

Three Schaumburg boys and their parents, the first to be convicted under the village's vandalism ordinance, must pay fines of up to $150 and make $962 restitution, a judge ordered Monday.

Associate Judge John J. Limperis of the Cook County Circuit Court ordered the fines and restitution against two 14-year-olds, a 15-year-old and their parents for a vandalism incident March 10.

The three youths were found guilty of causing $962 damage to a car owned by Barbara Plumley, of 18 Flintshire Dr., Schaumburg, by scratching the car's hood, damaging a windshield and putting mud into its gas tank.

THE INCIDENT occurred in the parking lot at Flintshire Drive and Angus Court, police said. The youths were arrested March 21.

Limperis, in the Schaumburg branch of Circuit Court, ordered each youth to pay $35 in fines and $10 each in court costs.

The judge then fined each pair of parents $125 plus $25 court costs, and ordered that the families pay a total of $962 to Ms. Plumley.

The ordinance, passed by the Schaumburg Village Board last winter, is modeled after vandalism ordinances passed by other North and Northwest suburban communities.

The ordinance makes restitution to victims mandatory and holds parents responsible for acts of vandalism committed by their children.

Dist. 54 signup set for kindergarten

Schaumburg School Dist. 54 will conduct kindergarten registration Wednesday. Children eligible to enter kindergarten in September must be 5-years old on or before Dec. 1, 1977. A birth certificate must be presented at time of registration.

For information, contact Milton Derr, associate superintendent, 885-4200.

to take a chance," she says, so she delayed her expedition.

Late last week, she picked up the expedition again and went out to the 100-acre Schaumburg farm where Matlick and his family live. She is a licensed real estate salesman, and she asked if the farm was for sale. She was told that it was not, that it never would be and that she could not enter.

Sunday night, she had a friend from Des Plaines drive her to the house in Glenview. A gray-haired woman in a white uniform and a sweater met her at the door.

"I was supposed to be a guest for the weekend with Helen Brach," Mrs. Diamond said.

THE WOMAN looked incredulous.

"Don't you read the papers?" she demanded.

"About what?" Mrs. Diamond asked.

Again, she was unable to get in. She remains undaunted. She phoned Bartlett Monday to pass along her information and to try to get some from him to help her investigation.

Meanwhile, the past couple of days have convinced Mrs. Diamond that Mrs. Brach is no longer alive. She has been receiving "death signs" the past three days, she says, and it could mean that Mrs. Brach has been killed by her captor.

SHE SAYS SHE even knows the name of Mrs. Brach's killer. He is a man Mrs. Diamond describes as "violent and obsessed" with "sadistic tendencies" and the ability to be a "terrific actor."

She told Bartlett of her suspect; he told her he has to go on evidence.

And so far, Bartlett says, there isn't much of that. Asked about the status of the case, he replied: "quo."

The department's investigation has included a search of the Schaumburg farm both by foot and by helicopter.

"We don't have any evidence of one kind or another," Bartlett says.

While a number of psychics and astrologers have called, he says he generally is a "skeptic" about their accuracy. A couple have asked to hold something belonging to Mrs. Brach to help them receive "vibrations," and Bartlett says police have complied with the request.

"BUT WE HAVEN'T come up with anything because of it," he adds. "They mean well."

Mrs. Diamond plans to continue her investigation although she is not sure "what the next step will be."

More than airline involved in crash suits

by TONI GINNETTI

Second of two parts

The airlines are generally blamed for air accidents, except in court. Today Herald reporters write about the airline industry's efforts to train employes for emergencies and the disaster plans used by area hospitals in case of an aviation disaster.

To the layman who uses air transportation, a plane crash would seem the obvious fault of an airline.

The years that it takes to resolve wrongful death claims filed in the wake of commercial air disasters are the best proof of the fallacy of that reasoning.

While an airline typically is the prime defendant named, manufacturers of aircraft, fuel manufacturers, even the U.S. government which employs air traffic controllers through the Federal Aviation Administration, commonly are named as defendants.

DOMESTIC AIR CRASH litigation generally is filed in federal court because of the cross-state residency of victims and airline headquarters. In Cook County, however, a number of cases are filed in the state circuit court because many airlines have offices in Chicago.

THERE ARE generally two steps to resolving airline litigation. The establishment of liability for an accident must first be determined, then individual damage claims are settled.

"Early on the liability is usually resolved, and then the cases will lie around for years resolving damages," according to noted personal injury attorney Philip H. Coorby. "It's not the cast itself that's taking so long, it's the resolution of the damages."

Liability "is the major hurdle," according to Wallace E. Maloney, an expert in air litigation who represents airlines. If an airline is "obviously liable" for a mishap, "there is no sense in prolonging it," Maloney said. "It's a matter of 'get out the check book.' "

IN THE 1968 CRASH of a North Central Airlines converted turbo-prop jet at O'Hare Airport, lawsuits named four parties as defendants. They included the airline; General Motors Corp., which converted the craft, Pacific Airmotive Corp., a subcontractor of GM; and General Dynamics Corp., the craft's original builder.

Only the airline was found liable.

Some 95 per cent of all suits are settled out of court, but attorneys will disagree on the "psychology" of delaying settlements.

Hospitals set for disaster at O'Hare

by KURT BAER

Resurrection Hospital, on Chicago's Far Northwest Side, sits in the middle of a "disaster triangle."

To the north, Chicago and North Western Ry. trains rumble night and day; to the south stretches the Kennedy Expressway and the Chicago Transit Authority's Jefferson Park train line; and in the west, the world's busiest airport, O'Hare Field, buzzes with take-offs and landings.

Resurrection is O'Hare's hospital, and twice it has had to implement disaster plans because of crashes at the airport.

• Dec. 27, 1968, a North Central Airlines twin-engine turboprop plane crashed into a Braniff International Airlines hangar while attempting to land in a heavy fog. Twenty-seven of the 45 persons on board the plane were killed.

• Dec. 20, 1972, a North Central Airlines DC-9 collided with a Delta Airlines Convair 880 on the runway, killing 10 of the passengers on the North Central jet.

IN BOTH INSTANCES, the dead and the injured were brought to Resurrection's door, the hospital closest to O'Hare.

A telephone call from police and fire officials initially alerts the hospital. "A Code Zero is sounded and all the supervisors, nurses and doctors available respond to the emergency room," says Sister Donna Marie, Resurrection's assistant director of nursing.

Injuries are assessed and assigned priority for treatment according to a system known as "Triage." Persons needing immediate life-saving treatment are cared for first, followed by those who require immediate surgery, X-ray, minimal treatment and observation, treatment and release.

EVERY HOSPITAL is required to have a disaster plan and to practice it, says John Wilke, chairman of the mass casualty committee at Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge.

"If your plan is not practiced and not put to use, it might as well sit on the shelf," says Wilke. "It's easy to think of disaster planning as just another committee. But when the time actually comes, that's when the benefits are reaped."

Lutheran General, as well as Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines, and Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, are back-up hospitals for Resurrection in airport injury cases. Four members of the North Central crew injured in the 1973 crash were brought to Lutheran General for treatment.

CODE YELLOW sounds the mass casualty alert at Lutheran General.

"Through the use of a data control center, we are able to identify where

They have been called obsolete cliques and sources of confusion and wasted time.

The Rolling Meadows City Council has been doing business through committees since the city was incorporated, but Mayor Roland J. Meyer says he has "seen nothing come out of these committees for the past few years."

Several aldermen say that committees slow up council action because, while one committee is preparing a report, the other aldermen are in the dark. By the time all the aldermen know what's going on, a lot of time has been wasted.

BUT STARTING Tuesday the city may have no more committees. City Mgr. Thomas Palmer has canceled all committee meetings and has asked City Atty. Don Rose to prepare an ordinance abolishing committees.

Under the new system, the city manager and his staff will be responsible for providing all data to the city council, instead of the council's three major committees — public works, finance and license, police fire and health.

Most of the aldermen agree that the committee system is not the most efficient.

"All the information will still come from the staff," said Ald. Raymond Neuckranz, 1st. "But this way all the aldermen will be informed of the same things at the same time. The staff will be saying this is what we need and this is what it will cost and here are your choices for paying for it."

NEUCKRANZ SAID the city's water problem is an example of how committees can slow things up. The public works committee had information from the engineers on the need for a new well and storage tank, he said, but no information on what it would cost and how it would be paid for.

The result was that the public works recommendation to drill a new well was ready for a final vote before the council realized that the money, though safely in the bank, was not in the budget.

Neuckranz said when the council meets as a whole, the aldermen have a better idea of how the council will vote when it takes official action. He said a committee can spend hours agreeing on a program only to have

Cop union chief arrested again for drunken driving

John Flood

John J. Flood, president of the Combined Counties Police Assn., again has been arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated and improper lane usage.

Flood, 36, of 407 Killarney, Mundelein, was driving northbound on Arlington Heights Road, just south of Checker Drive Saturday when his car was clocked by Buffalo Grove police speeding 43 miles per hour in a 35 mile-per-hour zone.

Patrolman Walter Grochowski reported that he pulled Flood's car over after he saw it traveling on an "unsure" path.

POLICE SAID THERE was a heavy odor of alcohol on Flood's breath as he "staggered" from his car about 4 a.m. He then was placed under arrest and brought back to the Buffalo Grove police station where he was charged with speeding, improper lane usage, drunken driving, refusing to take a breathalyzer test and battery.

Flood was charged with battery after he allegedly grabbed Sgt. Peter Lippert around the neck with his hands at the police station and said "Don't tell me what to do."

Police said Flood was uncooperative during arrest procedures and several times requested police not charge him with the drunken driving count.

Flood is scheduled to appear in the Arlington Heights branch of the Cook County Circuit Court June 21 at 11 a.m. He is free after posting a $1,000 bond Saturday.

FLOOD SAID MONDAY he would not comment on the charges on advice of his attorneys.

"All I can really say is that I'll go to court and stand trial on these (charges)," said Flood, a Cook County Sheriff's policeman on leave.

The CCPA president was arrested by Mundelein police Oct. 6 for drunken driving and improper lane usage after his car struck another car in a parking lot. Flood was placed in a municipal lockup after refusing to be fingerprinted or photographed.

Flood also was charged with leaving the scene of an accident in connection with the collision. All three charges were consolidated and are scheduled to be heard in the Waukegan branch of Lake County Circuit Court May 17.

The CCPA, the only organization of its kind in the Chicago area, was formed in 1969 by Flood, who left his job as sergeant for Cook County to devote full time to the union.

The organization has grown to more than 2,000 members and represents 50 chapters, including Wheeling, Des Plaines and Mount Prospect. Mundelein and Buffalo Grove are not members of the CCPA.

Olsen wanted to know about meet

Palatine Township Supervisor Howard Olsen said he was "kind of surprised" that he was not invited to a meeting Saturday between the Palatine village and park boards to discuss details of the proposed use of old Palatine High School as a civic center.

At the meeting the park board agreed to assume responsibility for maintenance of most of the space — 10,000 square feet — originally earmarked for township use. The park board agreed to maintain the space because the township has not made any commitment to the plan to convert the high school into a civic center.

"I'm kind of surprised that since we have been on the fringes of this thing since the beginning that we were not notified of the meeting," Olsen said.

HE SAID ALTHOUGH the township has expressed "a continued interest" in using portions of the high school, "Our feeling is that we couldn't make any decision until the electors decide if they want to buy it or not."

On June 4 voters in the village and the park district will be asked to approve separate referendums on the proposed purchase and renovation of the high school, 150 E. Wood St.

The village and park district plan to jointly purchase the property for $650,000 from High School Dist. 211 pending successful referendums. The township had been asked to participate in the joint effort, but has refrained from making any commitments.

ARCHITECTS WHO drew up renovation plans earmarked 10,000 square feet to house the township's senior citizens center, day-care center and township office.

Township Trustee James Wilson said there is "an excellent chance" the township will want to use a portion of the building if voters approve renovation of the building as a civic center.

"When the voters say 'yes' — and hopefully they will — then we'll go roaring in there to see if we can fill up some of that space," Wilson said.

OLSEN AND WILSON said a study comparing costs of housing the agencies in rented buildings and moving them to the high school would help determine whether the township would use portions of the building.

Olsen has suggested that the township begin planning such a study, but the board has turned down his proposal until the purchase of the high school is approved.

The village will ask voters June 4 to approve payment of $390,000 toward the purchase price and park district voters will be asked to OK an expenditure of $260,000.

Park district voters also will be asked to approve an additional $40,000 to renovate the park district's portion of the property.

Voters in the village will be asked to choose between a $1.2 million plan to remodel the school and a $1.6 million proposal to build a new village hall on the present site, 54 S. Brockway St.

Businessman steers to van pooling

by PAT GERLACH

Imagine starting a work day by strolling down the front walk to a luxury van waiting to take you to the door of your office building or plant.

Enroute you can read the morning paper, sip coffee or catch an extra 40 winks. Or you might prefer to just sit back in the comfortable airplane-type seat and listen to soothing music on stereo headsets in the vehicle, completely soundproofed with wall and ceiling carpet.

The idea is not at all far-fetched, say a group of suburban business leaders seeking Schaumburg and Rolling Meadows village and community support for the idea.

THE DRIVING force behind the local van pooling effort is Robert Winslow, managing director of IDC Real Estate, Schaumburg.

Wislow said he believes a joint van pooling program established by businesses in Schaumburg's Woodfield Shopping Center area "would provide more than enough riders to be successful."

He wants to interest Schaumburg businesses including Motorla, Union Oil, Addressograph-Multigraph, the Illinois Dept. of Transportation, International Harvester, Mobile Oil and the Woodfield Office Assn. in the proposed program.

And Wislow, said he hopes Rolling Meadows' major businesses like Gould, Inc., Western Electric and Chemplex will get on the bandwagon.

A recent van pooling interest survey done at Rockwell International's Admiral-Schaumburg Division, showed 47 of 237 workers polled indicated an interest in the program

WISLOW IS awaiting the results of similar research being done at other large firms in the Schaumburg-Rolling Meadows area.

His proposed program would have employes from one or more local companies use a 12-passenger van for daily commuting.

Wislow has calculated fares of about $20 per month for a daily round trip of 20 miles to $30 per month for a round trip of 70 miles.

He said he believes potential advantages of the program to both users and the general public will include:

- Reduced energy consumption,
- Reduced risk and tension of commuting;
- Reduced congestion on streets and highways:
- Reduced air and noise pollution;
- Reduced parking problems;
- Reduced cost to the employes.

"In fact, it seems to me that there is a strong possibility of eliminating one car in some families through use of the van program," Wislow said.

ROBERT BRAWLEY, Motorola's facilities director, and Russell Larson, a Union Oil vice president, agree

Both Brawley and Larson have been seeking mass transportation programs for the Schaumburg area.

"I think this is very reasonable, in fact, I'm optimistic in thinking it's just about here," Larson said.

Brawley favors an immediate "pilot program so we are no longer speculating but have some actual facts and figures."

SUCCESSFUL van pooling programs are operating in Los Angeles, Calif., St. Paul, Minn., and Houston, Tex.

Wislow said the Urban Mass Transportation Administration favors the program and has established a grant program to help purchase vans and set up systems Recent UMTA grants went to Knoxville, Tenn. with $900,000, Marin, Calif., with $684,000 and $520,000 to the Norfolk, Va. area.

But Wislow and other local businessmen said they believe the van pooling service is vital to the Schaumburg area now and they do not favor waiting up to 18 months for approval of a government grant. They said they believe companies participating in the program should help buy the vans.

Wislow and Chrysler Corp., an active nationwide van pooling supporter, is willing to help with financing and Woodfield Bank has "a strong interest" in the local program.

"I think eventually we might want to go out for some federal money because they also have 'abort' funding in case a program doesn't work out," Wislow said.

HE SAID municipal support from Schaumburg and Rolling Meadows may be necessary to complete grant applications "but we don't know yet and won't make those inquiries until we know for sure there is business interest in the program."

But Wislow said he and other business leaders are "hopeful" Rolling Meadows and Schaumburg officials will support the van pooling effort..

"We intend to go to the municipal people just as soon as we get the business surveys back and we hope other companies that haven't yet heard about the program will be in touch with us if they are interested,"

Funds asked for bilingual library

A $150,000 grant to cover three more years of funding for a special bilingual library program serving Spanish-speaking residents in eight Northwest suburbs is being sought by program administrators.

Stephanie Ardito, field librarian for the program based in the Palatine Public Library, said the grant application has been sent to the Chicago Community Trust, a group of Chicago banks which provide money for a variety of community organizations and groups in Cook County.

An estimated 5,000 to 6,000 Spanish-speaking residents live in the Northwest suburbs.

MS. ARDITO SAID the grant application has been made to this group because the program cannot be renewed under the federal program which awarded the initial money to start the program.

The program began in March 1976 with a $34,355 first-year grant which was extended to include another $36,395 to fund the program through October.

The federal grant was administered under the Library Services and Construction Act and was awarded by the Illinois State Library Assn.

Ms. Ardito said in addition to the $150,000, the program is seeking three additional persons to be paid for by the Chicago Community Trust. She said the group is scheduled to consider the grant at a meeting June 21.

If the committee fails to approve the grant, she said other foundations, such as the Ford Foundation, would be approached for funding.

TWO OF THE original eight Northwest suburban libraries in the program will drop out after October, Ms. Ardito said, while six new libraries, all in Lake County, will join the program.

Dropping out are Elk Grove Village and Barrington. Elk Grove Village will maintain a small collection of materials for Spnaish-speaking persons but does not plan to fund an administrator for the program Remaining in the program are Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg Township, Palatine, and Indian Trails

Joining the program will be North Chicago, Waukegan, the Ela Township area including Lake Zurich and Libertyville, and the Fremont library district including Mundelein and the Vernon Township Library

Materials for the program including books, records, tapes and magazines for Spanish-speaking residents, are housed at the Palatine Library, 500 N. Benton St

In addition, the program has sponsored special events such as Sunday afternoon films in Spanish.

Ms. Ardito said the program has been well accepted among Spanish-speaking residents.

"In the last six months we have seen many more people coming in," she said. She said the Sunday afternoon films have drawn audiences numbering from 80 to 130.

The program also has begun working with bilingual teachers in Northwest suburban schools, she said.

City committees may get the ax

the whole council vote it down and "throw all our work out."

SEVERAL ALDERMEN and the mayor agreed that without the committees, the city manager will be held more accountable for getting things done than he was before.

"Even under the committee system the city manager does the leg work," said Ald. William Ahrens, 2nd. "But he could always pass the buck to the committees. This way, there will be no buck passing.

Meyer said he and some aldermen may be tempted to treat the city manager as "a scapegoat. It gives them and me a chance to turn things over to the city manager. I've already had people ask me things and I'll say 'it's up to the city manager.' They say they voted for me and not him, but that's the way our system is set up."

PALMER IS NOT concerned about being made a scapegoat, and he said he believes the system will help the aldermen do their jobs more efficiently.

"The system is designed to save them time," he said. "They are part-time aldermen. My whole concept is that the administration can provide them with the information they need to do their jobs."

Ald. Kenneth Retzke, 5th, is not as sold on doing away with committees as some of his colleagues

"I think this (committees) is a good system," he said. "You often can thrash out many of the smaller problems in a smaller group. I think if you get too many people talking it can get out of control."

Retzke said if the ordinance comes up at Tuesday's meeting, he will not vote on it until he can learn more about it.

"I like to talk things out first and get a little insight. I don't think it's in a votable stage," he said.

Cake, coffee treat for Palmer tonight

The Rolling Meadows Woman's Club will help welcome City Mgr. Thomas Palmer to his first city council meeting tonight by serving cake and coffee.

The meeting will begin at 8:30 p.m.

2 teens arrested in burglary attempt

Rolling Meadows police early Monday arrested two Hanover Park teens for burglary after the youths allegedly tried to break into a restaurant through its roof.

Police said they arrested Joseph A. McClintock, 17, and a 15-year-old boy at 3 a.m. Monday on the roof of Jake's Pub, 4015 Algonquin Rd., Rolling Meadows.

Det. Sgt. Charles Smith of Rolling Meadows said police received a call from a passerby who reported seeing youths on the roof of the building at about 2:30 a.m.

Smith and Detectives Don Ballantine, Harvey Greenway and Marvin Hamann and Patrolmen John Drezen and Richard Pletz surrounded the restaurant, climbed on the roof and caught the 15-year-old on the roof and McClintock hiding between the roof and the Pub's ceiling, Smith said.

POLICE ALSO recovered burglary tools from the pair, Smith said.

Police charged McClintock with burglary and possession of burglary tools. McClintock was assigned $5,000 bond, and was taken to Cook County Jail to await a court date May 24 in the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

The 15-year-old was charged in a delinquency petition with burglary and sent to Audy Juvenile Home, Chicago, to await a hearing in the Juvenile Division of Cook County Circuit Court.

More than airline involved in crash suits

by TONI GINNETTI

Second of two parts

The airlines are generally blamed for air accidents, except in court. Today Herald reporters write about the airline industry's efforts to train employes for emergencies and the disaster plans used by area hospitals in case of an aviation disaster.

To the layman who uses air transportation, a plane crash would seem the obvious fault of an airline.

The years that it takes to resolve wrongful death claims filed in the wake of commercial air disasters are the best proof of the fallacy of that reasoning.

While an airline typically is the prime defendant named, manufacturers of aircraft, fuel manufacturers, even the U.S. government which employs air traffic controllers through the Federal Aviation Administration, commonly are named as defendants.

DOMESTIC AIR CRASH litigation generally is filed in federal court because of the cross-state residency of victims and airline headquarters. In Cook County, however, a number of cases are filed in the state circuit court because many airlines have offices in Chicago.

THERE ARE generally two steps to resolving airline litigation. The establishment of liability for an accident must first be determined, then individual damage claims are settled.

"Early on the liability is usually resolved, and then the cases will lie around for years resolving damages," according to noted personal injury attorney Philip H. Coorby. "It's not the cast itself that's taking so long, it's the resolution of the damages."

Liability "is the major hurdle," according to Wallace E. Maloney, an expert in air litigation who represents airlines. If an airline is "obviously liable" for a mishap, "there is no sense in prolonging it," Maloney said. "It's a matter of 'get out the check book.'"

IN THE 1968 CRASH of a North Central Airlines converted turbo-prop jet at O'Hare Airport, lawsuits named four parties as defendants. They included the airline; General Motors Corp., which converted the craft, Pacific Airmotive Corp., a subcontractor of GM; and General Dynamics Corp., the craft's original builder.

Only the airline was found liable.

Some 95 per cent of all suits are settled out of court, but attorneys will disagree on the "psychology" of delaying settlements.

Hospitals set for disaster at O'Hare

by KURT BAER

Resurrection Hospital, on Chicago's Far Northwest Side, sits in the middle of a "disaster triangle."

To the north, Chicago and North Western Ry. trains rumble night and day; to the south stretches the Kennedy Expressway and the Chicago Transit Authority's Jefferson Park train line; and in the west, the world's busiest airport, O'Hare Field, buzzes with take-offs and landings.

Resurrection is O'Hare's hospital, and twice it has had to implement disaster plans because of crashes at the airport.

• Dec. 27, 1968, a North Central Airlines twin-engine turboprop plane crashed into a Braniff International Airlines hangar while attempting to land in a heavy fog. Twenty-seven of the 45 persons on board the plane were killed.

• Dec. 20, 1972, a North Central Airlines DC-9 collided with a Delta Airlines Convair 880 on the runway, killing 10 of the passengers on the North Central jet.

IN BOTH INSTANCES, the dead and the injured were brought to Resurrection's door, the hospital closest to O'Hare.

A telephone call from police and fire officials initially alerts the hospital. "A Code Zero is sounded and all the supervisors, nurses and doctors available respond to the emergency room," says Sister Donna Marie, Resurrection's assistant director of nursing.

Injuries are assessed and assigned priority for treatment according to a system known as "Triage." Persons needing immediate life-saving treatment are cared for first, followed by those who require immediate surgery, X-ray, minimal treatment and observation, treatment and release.

EVERY HOSPITAL is required to have a disaster plan and to practice it, says John Wilke, chairman of the mass casualty committee at Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge.

"If your plan is not practiced and not put to use, it might as well sit on the shelf," says Wilke. "It's easy to think of disaster planning as just another committee. But when the time actually comes, that's when the benefits are reaped."

Lutheran General, as well as Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines, and Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, are back-up hospitals for Resurrection in airport injury cases. Four members of the North Central crew injured in the 1978 crash were brought to Lutheran General for treatment.

CODE YELLOW sounds the mass casualty alert at Lutheran General.

"Through the use of a data control center, we are able to identify where

Guss violated pledge: Coughlin

Trustee Bryan P. Coughlin Monday night criticized Village Pres. Robert J. Guss, whom the trustee said violated a campaign pledge for open government by seeking written comments from trustees on their preferences for committee assignments.

In a letter to Guss outlining his committee preferences, Coughlin said the request for written comments was disturbing.

"If you intend to make this a regular part of your communication with your board, I feel you would be depriving the citizens of Palatine of the open type of government which you promised in your campaign," Coughlin said.

"Matters of communication between you and your board should be freely discussed in open meetings when citizens and press can be fully appraised of whatever information goes into the decision-making process," he said.

COUGHLIN, WHO supported Guss' opponent, in last month's village election, Trustee Fred Zajonc, was named chairman of the streets and traffic committee.

The committee was Coughlin's fifth choice among the possible six village board committees. He had requested to be named chairman of either the administration, legislation and finance committee or the planning, building and zoning committee.

Coughlin stepped down as chairman of the planning, building and zoning committee two years ago following a dispute with then-village president Wendell E. Jones.

In his letter, Coughlin added he will make public all written materials which are requested from him in the future.

Coughlin also urged Guss to rotate committee chairmanships. The Jones administration maintained the same committee assignments for four years.

"NEW THINKING IS required at the head of these committees to best service the citizens of Palatine," he said. "I think you should commit yourself to have periodic rotation of both chairman and members of the various committees.

In the letter, Coughlin pledged to work with Guss during the village resident's new administration, "despite my public support for your opponent during the past election."

5 years probation for Patty Hearst

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst was sentenced Monday to five years probation for two charges stemming from a 1974 crime spree.

Miss Hearst, 23, flanked by her two attorneys, stood and faced the judge to hear the sentence that could have been life in prison.

She had pleaded "no contest" April 18 to charges of assault with a deadly weapon and robbery while a member of the Symbionese Liberation Army. Nine other charges, including assault, robbery and kidnaping, were dismissed at the time of sentencing.

JUDGE E. TALBOT Callister sentenced her to five years probation on each of two counts with several conditions, including financial restitution to the owner of a sporting goods store she peppered with machine gun fire.

Other conditions were that she seek training or schooling and maintain a residence under the direction of the probation officer.

"I have been a criminal judge for nearly seven years," Judge E. Talbot Callister said. "During that time, I don't remember how many people I have sentenced, but it must be several thousand. None of those decisions has been more difficult than the one that faces me today."

He said he was convinced Miss Hearst would be in physical danger if she were to be jailed.

"SHE IS NOT A present or a future law enforcement risk," Callister said, adding that all law enforcement agencies involved in the case agreed that further confinement was not necessary.

Dressed in a long tan skirt and brown sweater, Miss Hearst sat quietly through the court proceeding Monday and arose to say only, "Yes, your honor," when asked if she was ready for sentencing.

Albert Johnson, who has defended Miss Hearst here, said he decided on the "no contest" plea because he was convinced she could not get a fair

Cop union chief arrested again for drunken driving

John Flood

John J. Flood, president of the Combined Counties Police Assn., again has been arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated and improper lane usage.

Flood, 36, of 407 Killarney, Mundelein, was driving northbound on Arlington Heights Road, just south of Checker Drive Saturday when his car was clocked by Buffalo Grove police speeding 43 miles per hour in a 35 mile-per-hour zone.

Patrolman Walter Grochowski reported that he pulled Flood's car over after he saw it traveling on an "unsure" path.

POLICE SAID THERE was a heavy odor of alcohol on Flood's breath as he "staggered" from his car about 4 a.m. He then was placed under arrest and brought back to the Buffalo Grove police station where he was charged with speeding, improper lane usage, drunken driving, refusing to take a breathalyzer test and battery.

Flood was charged with battery after he allegedly grabbed Sgt. Peter Lippert around the neck with his hands at the police station and said "Don't tell me what to do."

Police said Flood was uncooperative during arrest procedures and several times requested police not charge him with the drunken driving count.

Flood is scheduled to appear in the Arlington Heights branch of the Cook County Circuit Court June 21 at 11 a.m. He is free after posting a $1,000 bond Saturday.

FLOOD SAID MONDAY he would not comment on the charges on advice of his attorneys.

"All I can really say is that I'll go to court and stand trial on these (charges)," said Flood, a Cook County Sheriff's policeman on leave.

The CCPA president was arrested by Mundelein police Oct. 6 for drunken driving and improper lane usage after his car struck another car in a parking lot. Flood was placed in a municipal lockup after refusing to be fingerprinted or photographed.

Flood also was charged with leaving the scene of an accident in connection with the collision. All three charges were consolidated and are scheduled to be heard in the Waukegan branch of Lake County Circuit Court May 17.

The CCPA, the only organization of its kind in the Chicago area, was formed in 1969 by Flood, who left his job as sergeant for Cook County to devote full time to the union.

The organization has grown to more than 2,000 members and represents 50 chapters, including Wheeling, Des Plaines and Mount Prospect. Mundelein and Buffalo Grove are not members of the CCPA.

Olsen wanted to know about meet

Palatine Township Supervisor Howard Olsen said he was "kind of surprised" that he was not invited to a meeting Saturday between the Palatine village and park boards to discuss details of the proposed use of old Palatine High School as a civic center.

At the meeting the park board agreed to assume responsibility for maintenance of most of the space — 10,000 square feet — originally earmarked for township use. The park board agreed to maintain the space because the township has not made any commitment to the plan to convert the high school into a civic center.

"I'm kind of surprised that since we have been on the fringes of this thing since the beginning that we were not notified of the meeting," Olsen said.

HE SAID ALTHOUGH the township has expressed "a continued interest" in using portions of the high school, "Our feeling is that we couldn't make any decision until the electors decide if they want to buy it or not."

On June 4 voters in the village and the park district will be asked to approve separate referendums on the proposed purchase and renovation of the high school, 150 E. Wood St.

The village and park district plan to jointly purchase the property for $650,000 from High School Dist. 211 pending successful referendums. The township had been asked to participate in the joint effort, but has refrained from making any commitments.

ARCHITECTS WHO drew up renovation plans earmarked 10,000 square feet to house the township's senior citizens center, day-care center and township office.

Township Trustee James Wilson said there is "an excellent chance" the township will want to use a portion of the building if voters approve renovation of the building as a civic center.

"When the voters say 'yes' — and hopefully they will — then we'll go roaring in there to see if we can fill up some of that space," Wilson said.

OLSEN AND WILSON said a study comparing costs of housing the agencies in rented buildings and moving them to the high school would help determine whether the township would use portions of the building.

Olsen has suggested that the township begin planning such a study, but the board has turned down his proposal until the purchase of the high school is approved.

The village will ask voters June 4 to approve payment of $390,000 toward the purchase price and park district voters will be asked to OK an expenditure of $260,000.

Park district voters also will be asked to approve an additional $40,000 to renovate the park district's portion of the property.

Voters in the village will be asked to choose between a $1.2 million plan to remodel the school and a $1.6 million proposal to build a new village hall on the present site, 54 S. Brockway St.

Funds asked for bilingual library

A $150,000 grant to cover three more years of funding for a special bilingual library program serving Spanish-speaking residents in eight Northwest suburbs is being sought by program administrators.

Stephanie Ardito, field librarian for the program based in the Palatine Public Library, said the grant application has been sent to the Chicago Community Trust, a group of Chicago banks which provide money for a variety of community organizations and groups in Cook County.

An estimated 5,000 to 6,000 Spanish-speaking residents live in the Northwest suburbs.

MS. ARDITO SAID the grant application has been made to this group because the program cannot be renewed under the federal program which awarded the initial money to start the program.

The program began in March 1976 with a $34,355 first-year grant which was extended to include another $36,395 to fund the program through October.

The federal grant was administered under the Library Services and Construction Act and was awarded by the Illinois State Library Assn.

Ms. Ardito said in addition to the $150,000, the program is seeking three additional persons to be paid for by the Chicago Community Trust. She said the group is scheduled to consider the grant at a meeting June 21.

If the committee fails to approve the grant, she said other foundations, such as the Ford Foundation, would be approached for funding.

TWO OF THE original eight Northwest suburban libraries in the program will drop out after October, Ms. Ardito said, while six new libraries, all in Lake County, will join the program.

Dropping out are Elk Grove Village and Barrington. Elk Grove Village will maintain a small collection of materials for Spnaish-speaking persons but does not plan to fund an administrator for the program. Remaining in the program are Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg Township, Palatine, and Indian Trails.

Joining the program will be North Chicago, Waukegan, the Ela Township area including Lake Zurich and Libertyville, and the Fremont library district including Mundelein and the Vernon Township Library.

Materials for the program including books, records, tapes and magazines for Spanish-speaking residents, are housed at the Palatine Library, 500 N. Benton St.

In addition, the program has sponsored special events such as Sunday afternoon films in Spanish.

Ms. Ardito said the program has been well accepted among Spanish-speaking residents.

"In the last six months we have seen many more people coming in," she said. She said the Sunday afternoon films have drawn audiences numbering from 80 to 130.

The program also has begun working with bilingual teachers in Northwest suburban schools, she said.

Bjorvik new Salt Creek lawyer

Roger Bjorvik has been hired as attorney for the Salt Creek Rural Park District, replacing Michael Stronberg who resigned recently.

Bjorvik, who also serves as attorney for the Palatine Park District, will begin his duties at tonight's meeting. He will be paid a $50 monthly retainer fee and $50 an hour for work done for the park district.

"We've been thinking about it (hiring a new attorney) for a long time, at least a year and a half," Comr. Thomas Menzel said. "We just thought we were due for a change."

MENZEL SAID one of the reasons for the move is that it will save money for the park district. He said Stronberg was receiving a $200 monthly retainer fee.

"He did a good job for us," Menzel said. "But our needs are very minimal. There's no sense paying an attorney $200 to sit there and take notes."

Stronberg refused to comment about his resignation.

Comr. John Ungerman, who interviewed Bjorvik for the job said Bjorvik would remove himself on any legal controveries between the Palatine and Salt Creek park districts.

"We're really happy to have him," Ungerman said. "If there's anybody who is familiar with park district law, it's him."

Beside Bjorvik, newly elected Comr. Siegmar Olaf Schneider will join the park board at tonight's meeting. Ungerman, who was appointed to the board in February and was elected to the post April 19, will be sworn in at the meeting.

The board also will elect officers at the meeting, which begins at 8 p.m.

Psychic foretells death of Brach

by JOHN LAMPINEN

Irene Diamond is convinced that missing heiress Helen Voorhees Brach is dead, the victim of a rejected suitor.

Glenview Police Chief William Bartlett believes that theory is fine, but he would rather have some evidence to back it up.

Bartlett has been getting calls from psychics and astrologers like Mrs. Diamond since late March when news of Mrs. Brach's disappearance began making headlines.

"I NEVER KNEW there were so many in the area," he says. "They all call. The only thing is, none of them can tell me where Mrs. Brach is."

Mrs. Brach, 65, has not been seen since Feb. 21, when her houseman, Jack Matlick, who lives on the Brach family farm in Schaumburg Township, says he drove her to O'Hare Airport to catch a plane to Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

Mrs. Diamond, 54, of Hoffman Estates has been practicing astrology for several years. She is known locally for her campaigns for village president, in which she has run and lost — despite predictions of victory — under her real name, Irene Petke.

She got interested in the Brach case a few weeks ago and says she wants to do something about it because of the "intrigue."

"It can also give validity to astrology," she adds.

INITIALLY, SHE tried to "communicate" with Mrs. Brach and she received "several impressions," she says. Those "impressions" told her:

"Mrs. Brach may still be alive and kept hidden somewhere against her will. He (her captor) made advances to her, and she resisted, and that made him mad."

However, to pin down her location and get more details of what happened, Mrs. Diamond says she must get inside the Brach mansion in Glenview so she can "reenact what happened."

Ten days ago, Mrs. Diamond was going to go to Glenview, represent herself as an old family friend and try to get into the house.

Some friends warned her against that, however, and then Mrs. Diamond noticed that there was a full moon last Tuesday.

"ERRATIC THINGS do come with the full moon, and there was no need to take a chance," she says, so she delayed her expedition.

Late last week, she picked up the expedition again and went out to the 100-acre Schaumburg farm where Matlick and his family live. She is a licensed real estate salesman, and she asked if the farm was for sale. She was told that it was not, that it never would be and that she could not enter.

Sunday night, she had a friend from Des Plaines drive her to the house in Glenview. A gray-haired woman in a white uniform and a sweater met her at the door.

"I was supposed to be a guest for the weekend with Helen Brach," Mrs. Diamond said.

THE WOMAN looked incredulous.

"Don't you read the papers?" she demanded.

"About what?" Mrs. Diamond asked.

Again, she was unable to get in. She remains undaunted. She phoned Bartlett Monday to pass along her information and to try to get some from him to help her investigation.

Meanwhile, the past couple of days have convinced Mrs. Diamond that Mrs. Brach is no longer alive. She has been receiving "death signs" the past three days, she says, and it could mean that Mrs. Brach has been killed by her captor.

SHE SAYS SHE even knows the name of Mrs. Brach's killer. He is a man Mrs. Diamond describes as "violent and obsessed" with "sadistic tendencies" and the ability to be a "terrific actor."

She told Bartlett of her suspect; he told her he has to go on evidence.

And so far, Bartlett says, there isn't much of that. Asked about the status of the case, he replied: "quo."

The department's investigation has included a search of the Schaumburg farm both by foot and by helicopter.

"We don't have any evidence of one kind or another," Bartlett says.

While a number of psychics and astrologers have called, he says he generally is a "skeptic" about their accuracy. A couple have asked to hold something belonging to Mrs. Brach to help them receive "vibrations," and Bartlett says police have complied with the request.

"BUT WE HAVEN'T come up with anything because of it," he adds. "They mean well."

Mrs. Diamond plans to continue her investigation although she is not sure "what the next step will be."

There will be an adjustment in her plan of attack, however. She is shunning the use of cover stories and will no longer hide the fact that she is an astrologer.

"The truth will set us free," she says. "Secretiveness is what creates the problems in people's lives."

More than airline involved in crash suits

by TONI GINNETTI

Second of two parts

The airlines are generally blamed for air accidents, except in court. Today Herald reporters write about the airline industry's efforts to train employes for emergencies and the disaster plans used by area hospitals in case of an aviation disaster.

To the layman who uses air transportation, a plane crash would seem the obvious fault of an airline.

The years that it takes to resolve wrongful death claims filed in the wake of commercial air disasters are the best proof of the fallacy of that reasoning.

While an airline typically is the prime defendant named, manufacturers of aircraft, fuel manufacturers, even the U.S. government which employs air traffic controllers through the Federal Aviation Administration, commonly are named as defendants.

DOMESTIC AIR CRASH litigation generally is filed in federal court because of the cross-state residency of victims and airline headquarters. In Cook County, however, a number of cases are filed in the state circuit court because many airlines have offices in Chicago.

THERE ARE generally two steps to resolving airline litigation. The establishment of liability for an accident must first be determined, then individual damage claims are settled.

"Early on the liability is usually resolved, and then the cases will lie around for years resolving damages," according to noted personal injury attorney Philip H. Coorby. "It's not the cast itself that's taking so long, it's the resolution of the damages."

Liability "is the major hurdle," according to Wallace E. Maloney, an expert in air litigation who represents airlines. If an airline is "obviously liable" for a mishap, "there is no sense in prolonging it," Maloney said. "It's a matter of 'get out the check book.' "

IN THE 1968 CRASH of a North Central Airlines converted turbo-prop jet at O'Hare Airport, lawsuits named four parties as defendants. They included the airline; General Motors Corp., which converted the craft, Pacific Airmotive Corp., a subcontractor of GM; and General Dynamics Corp., the craft's original builder.

Only the airline was found liable.

Some 95 per cent of all suits are settled out of court, but attorneys will disagree on the "psychology" of delaying settlements.

Hospitals set for disaster at O'Hare

by KURT BAER

Resurrection Hospital, on Chicago's Far Northwest Side, sits in the middle of a "disaster triangle."

To the north, Chicago and North Western Ry. trains rumble night and day; to the south stretches the Kennedy Expressway and the Chicago Transit Authority's Jefferson Park train line; and in the west, the world's busiest airport, O'Hare Field, buzzes with take-offs and landings.

Resurrection is O'Hare's hospital, and twice it has had to implement disaster plans because of crashes at the airport.

• Dec. 27, 1968, a North Central Airlines twin-engine turboprop plane crashed into a Braniff International Airlines hangar while attempting to land in a heavy fog. Twenty-seven of the 45 persons on board the plane were killed.

• Dec. 20, 1972, a North Central Airlines DC-9 collided with a Delta Airlines Convair 880 on the runway, killing 10 of the passengers on the North Central jet.

IN BOTH INSTANCES, the dead and the injured were brought to Resurrection's door, the hospital closest to O'Hare.

A telephone call from police and fire officials initially alerts the hospital. "A Code Zero is sounded and all the supervisors, nurses and doctors available respond to the emergency room," says Sister Donna Marie, Resurrection's assistant director of nursing.

Injuries are assessed and assigned priority for treatment according to a system known as "Triage." Persons needing immediate life-saving treatment are cared for first, followed by those who require immediate surgery, X-ray, minimal treatment and observation, treatment and release.

EVERY HOSPITAL is required to have a disaster plan and to practice it, says John Wilke, chairman of the mass casualty committee at Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge.

"If your plan is not practiced and not put to use, it might as well sit on the shelf," says Wilke. "It's easy to think of disaster planning as just another committee. But when the time actually comes, that's when the benefits are reaped."

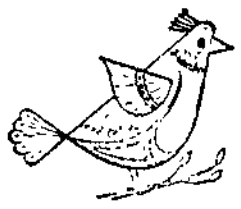

Lutheran General, as well as Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines, and Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, are back-up hospitals for Resurrection in airport injury cases. Four members of the North Central crew injured in the 1973 crash were brought to Lutheran General for treatment.

CODE YELLOW sounds the mass casualty alert at Lutheran General.

Saving elms a neighborly project

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

The 17 elm trees on the 400 block of S. Wille Street in Mount Prospect are still relatively healthy.

And homeowners in the neighborhood hope to keep them that way as long as possible for both esthetic and environmental reasons.

"The trees are part of the whole character of this older part of the village," says Raymond Friend, 414 S. Wille St. "And there are ecological reasons for wanting to keep a mature tree, too."

Friend and his neighbor Carl Fuerst, 410 S. Wille St., were the first ones on their block to learn to treat the 50-year-old trees for the prevention of the deadly Dutch Elm Disease. Thanks to the Mount Prospect Public Works Dept., which conducted five save-a-tree seminars, residents now are able to borrow the equipment from the village and buy the chemical necessary to treat their own trees.

"There is a certain pride in those trees," Fuerst said. "Everyone wants to keep them as long as possible. It probably is worth thousands of dollars to a homeowner to have a tree like that in their yards. It makes this a nice place to live."

The village decided to educate residents on the care of elm trees because the public works department lacks the money and manpower to treat all of the nearly 15,000 elms in Mount Prospect.

About 100 trees were lost last year after the Dutch elm disease spread. Mount Prospect's program is believed to be the only one of its kind in the Northwest suburbs.

After attending one of the save-a-tree-sessions, Friend and Fuerst purchased nine gallons of the preventative chemical from the village at $10 a gallon. They said they wanted to have the chemical, Lignason, on hand so they could sell it to other families on their block and treat their neighbors' trees upon request. Only one person refused their offer.

The men, in their spare time and on their days off, already have treated 10 of the elms on their block. The process takes between two and eight hours, depending on the weather and how quickly the tree will accept the 16-gallon solution. Roughly one gallon of Lignason is needed per tree. The remainder of the liquid treatment is

5 years probation for Patty Hearst

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst was sentenced Monday to five years probation for two charges stemming from a 1974 crime spree.

Miss Hearst, 23, flanked by her two attorneys, stood and faced the judge to hear the sentence that could have been life in prison.

She had pleaded "no contest" April 18 to charges of assault with a deadly weapon and robbery while a member of the Symbionese Liberation Army. Nine other charges, including assault, robbery and kidnaping, were dismissed at the time of sentencing.

JUDGE E. TALBOT Callister sentenced her to five years probation on each of two counts with several conditions, including financial restitution to the owner of a sporting goods store she peppered with machine gun fire.

Other conditions were that she seek training or schooling and maintain a residence under the direction of the probation officer.

"I have been a criminal judge for nearly seven years," Judge E. Talbot Callister said. "During that time, I don't remember how many people I have sentenced, but it must be several thousand. None of those decisions has been more difficult than the one that faces me today."

He said he was convinced Miss Hearst would be in physical danger if she were to be jailed.

"SHE IS NOT A present or a future law enforcement risk," Callister said, adding that all law enforcement agencies involved in the case agreed that further confinement was not necessary.

Dressed in a long tan skirt and brown sweater, Miss Hearst sat quietly through the court proceeding Monday and arose to say only, "Yes, your honor," when asked if she was ready for sentencing.

Albert Johnson, who has defended Miss Hearst here, said he decided on the "no contest" plea because he was convinced she could not get a fair

Cop union chief arrested again for drunken driving

John Flood

John J. Flood, president of the Combined Counties Police Assn., again has been arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated and improper lane usage.

Flood, 36, of 407 Killarney, Mundelein, was driving northbound on Arlington Heights Road, just south of Checker Drive Saturday when his car was clocked by Buffalo Grove police speeding 43 miles per hour in a 35 mile-per-hour zone.

Patrolman Walter Grochowski reported that he pulled Flood's car over after he saw it traveling on an "unsure" path.

POLICE SAID THERE was a heavy odor of alcohol on Flood's breath as he "staggered" from his car about 4 a.m. He then was placed under arrest and brought back to the Buffalo Grove police station where he was charged with speeding, improper lane usage, drunken driving, refusing to take a breathalyzer test and battery.

Flood was charged with battery after he allegedly grabbed Sgt. Peter Lippert around the neck with his hands at the police station and said "Don't tell me what to do."

Police said Flood was uncooperative during arrest procedures and several times requested police not charge him with the drunken driving count.

Flood is scheduled to appear in the Arlington Heights branch of the Cook County Circuit Court June 21 at 11 a.m. He is free after posting a $1,000 bond Saturday.

FLOOD SAID MONDAY he would not comment on the charges on advice of his attorneys.

"All I can really say is that I'll go to court and stand trial on these (charges)," said Flood, a Cook County Sheriff's policeman on leave.

The CCPA president was arrested by Mundelein police Oct. 6 for drunken driving and improper lane usage after his car struck another car in a parking lot. Flood was placed in a municipal lockup after refusing to be fingerprinted or photographed.

Flood also was charged with leaving the scene of an accident in connection with the collision. All three charges were consolidated and are scheduled to be heard in the Waukegan branch of Lake County Circuit Court May 17.

The CCPA, the only organization of its kind in the Chicago area, was formed in 1969 by Flood, who left his job as sergeant for Cook County to devote full time to the union.

The organization has grown to more than 2,000 members and represents 50 chapters, including Wheeling, Des Plaines and Mount Prospect. Mundelein and Buffalo Grove are not members of the CCPA.

A 16-GALLON tank filled with a special chemical solution is all that's needed by Mount Prospect residents to try to prevent the village's elm trees from getting Dutch Elm Disease. Mike Zadel, a forester in the village public works department, explains the injection process.

Saving trees a neighborly project

water

"It (Lignason) is just a fungicide which deters the beetles from hatching their eggs within the tree," Fuerst said

Friend and Fuerst have the injection procedure down to an art Fuerst kneels at the base of the elm and drills tiny holes in its trunk. Then a valve is inserted into each hole, which is about 2½ inches deep. The plugs are then connected with a clear plastic tubing and Friend pumps about 30 pounds of air into the 16-gallon tank, forcing the Lignason to flow into the tree

After the solution has drained into the tree it works its way upward, spreading throughout the elm, the plugs are removed and a sealer is sprayed into each of the holes.

"Then the tree heals itself," Friend said.

"I think it's under control," Fuerst said of the Dutch Elm epidemic "It's a challenge, but we're going to be able to save them.

Saving trees has become a block effort in several neighborhoods throughout the village "It looks like they finally have found a solution," Fuerst said. "It would be a pity not to take advantage of it. It's healthy when a community helps itself."

Pay raises hike budget in township

Salary hikes for Wheeling Township officials, election year expenses and publication of a quarterly newsletter have resulted in a 5 per cent increase in the 1977-78 township budget.

Already tentatively approved, the $436,775 budget is $24,157 more than last year's budget of $412,598. It will be considered at a public hearing May 24.

Township Supervisor Ethel Kolerus said in spite of the added expenses, the current town fund tax levy of about 7 cents per $100 assessed valuation probably will not increase.

The April election cost the township $31,125, about half of that for election judge salaries.

THE SALARIES of all elected officials were increased at a board meeting in March. The officials will receive only part of the increase this year, however, because the new salaries went into effect following the April 5 election The township's fiscal year begins March 1.

Mrs. Kolerus, for example, will receive $18,000 this year instead of the $21,000 salary approved for the supervisor in March. Her 1976-77 salary was $12,500.

Other township officials' salaries for 1977-78 include: Highway Comr. Arthur Olsen, $17,000, up from $14,000 last year, Assessor Marshall Theroux, $15,250, up from $14,500 last year; and Clerk Dorothy Hauff, $7,560, up from $6,000 The board of trustees will earn $40 per meeting this year, amounting to an extra $1,400 in the new budget. They received $35 per meeting last year

Publication of the Wheeling Township Quarterly Report this year will increase from $12,000 last year to $25,000 in 1977-78. The township began publishing the newsletter last fall.

THE YOUTH Committee will receive a $9,630 boost from last year's allocation of $70,000.

A line item of $175,000 for the township's new building is included in the 1977-78 budget. But Mrs. Kolerus said the amount will not be included in the tax levy The $175,000 was the amount the township received from the sale of the old township hall, 1818 E. Northwest Hwy.

The township's general assistance fund drops from $241,570 last year to $144,250 in the new budget, a 40 per cent decrease.

Lower rental fees and utility costs are the main reason for the decreased general assistance budget. Four social service agencies formerly located in rented facilities in the area now are housed in the new building, the Wheeling Township Community Service Center, 1616 N. Arlington Heights Rd.

Rental costs totaled $71,052 in the general assistance fund last year. Rents will tally only $30,000 in the new budget. The costs of utilities also is expected to decrease, from $19,920 last year to $10,000 in 1977-78.

The township will allocate $269,901 in federal revenue-sharing funds at the May 24 hearing. About $78,197 of that total is earmarked for services for the poor and elderly and $157,000 will go toward mental health.

Crossing guard will go to court May 23

by SCOTT FOSDICK

Crossing guard Fran Bernstein, who has accused a Maine Township man of assault by attempting to run her down while she was helping children cross the street, will take her case to court May 23

The case is scheduled to be heard before Judge Simon Porter in the Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Mrs. Bernstein, an East Maine Dist 63 crossing guard, said she was helping several children cross Church Street at the corner of Bumble Bee Drive one morning last month when Lee Snyder, 9148 Church St., Des Plaines, refused to honor her stop sign and almost ran her down

"HE PUT his foot on the gas and came right at me I jumped out of the way," Mrs Bernstein said. "He could have hit me if I'd fallen down"

The incident started, Mrs Bernstein said, with Snyder honking his horn several times as she was helping a large group of children cross the street

Mrs Bernstein said Snyder yelled at her to get out of the way because he was "late for work." When she refused, she said he shouted, "'I'm not waiting for those kids to get across!'"

WHEN SHE refused to move, she said he drove straight toward her. She got out of the way quickly. No one was hurt because all of the smaller children were already across, and a group of older children were waiting at the curb, watching the argument

This is the second time this year that a motorist has been accused of refusing to stop for a crossing guard in the Northwest suburbs. Linda McElderry, 19, of Elk Grove Village, March 24 was found guilty of disobeying an Elk Grove Village crossing guard's order to stop. She will be sentenced May 26

MRS. BERNSTEIN said most crossing guards have learned to live with discourteous drivers

"I've had people who have run my stop sign. Or they'll give me the finger, or yell at me It happens to all the crossing guards," she said "We're out there because we want to help the children. It's sad, it really is"

Mrs. Bernstein is being represented by Dist. 63 attorney, Jerome Robbins.

High school junior named new Miss Flame
